COURT LIMITS UNIONS IN USE OF BOYCOTTS

Attempts of Locals to Influence Other Unions Are Hit by Decision

DOES NOT STOP STRIKES

Ruling Says Clayton Act Does Not Allow Check on Interstate Trade

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—The supreme court of the United States has established no new principle in the injunction which it upheld against the Stonecutters' union, but has merely developed, the objection against the union's use of the power of boycott by labor unions.

There is nothing to prevent any labor union in the future from asking its members to strike against any employer who is declared "unfair" by that local, but the decision does mean that if a union in one city attempts to influence, coerce or otherwise affect the action of a union in another city, the power of the courts can be invoked to restrain such concerted action.

Justice Brandeis in his dissenting opinion points out that the power to influence other members of a national organization is inherent in the right of labor to use all the influence it can over its own members and that anyone who believes in labor union organization will recognize the value of that power. He declared too, that in the case under consideration there was no picketing or acts of violence. He contended that such restraints are not practical, are reasonable as the term is used in law.

Justice Sutherland, who rendered the opinion of the court, declared, however, that the Clayton act which amended the original Sherman law, did not permit any such interference with interstate trade as the stonecutters union were using.

POINTS TO PARALLEL

Justice Sutherland writes in his opinion that after reviewing the facts in the stonecutters' case, one might with a few changes in respect to the product involved, dates, names and incidents, really use the case of the Duplex Printing company versus Deering and the matters would be parallel. He says: "The object of the boycott was precisely the same as it is here and the interference with interstate commerce while they were more numerous and drastic, did not differ in essential character from the interference here."

"From the foregoing review, it is manifest that the acts and conduct of respondents (labor union) fall within the terms of the anti-trust act and petitioners are entitled to relief by injunction."

"The strikes ordered and carried out with the sole object of preventing the use of interstate commerce in the products in other states necessarily threatened to destroy or narrow petitioners' interstate trade by taking from them their customers."

"That the organizations in general purpose and in and of themselves were lawful and that the ultimate result aimed at may not have been illegal in itself are beside the point. Where the means adopted are unlawful, the innocent general character of the organization adopting them or the lawfulness of the ultimate end sought to be attained cannot serve as a justification."

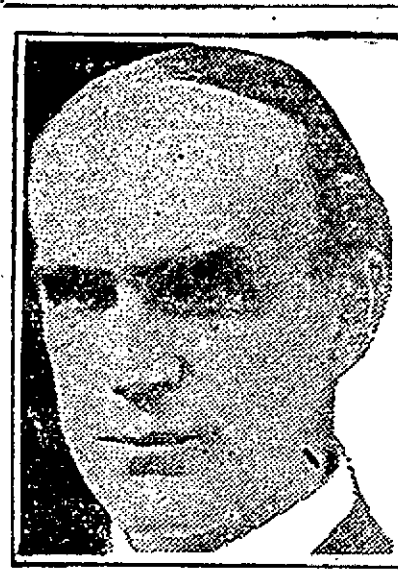

CUSTOMERS OUT OF STATE

The court in reviewing the evidence made the point that the Duplex Printing company and 25 other corporations—all but two were Indiana companies—had a combined investment of $5,000,000 and that more than 75 per cent of their customers were outside the state of Indiana. The Journeymen Stonecutters' association of North America, composed of mechanics engaged in stonecutting, has jurisdiction over 150 local unions and issued a notice to all its members not to work on stone that had been started by "men working in opposition to our organization."

The testimony showed that before the Colorado Industrial Commission local workers in Denver were ordered to stop work in the hope of influencing the local employer and other subcontractors to influence in turn the action of the Bedford company in Indiana.

This use of the boycotting power against the use of interstate commerce was not held to be justified by the other seven members of the supreme court. Other methods to influence local labor unions may be tried but if they have the appearance of concerted action they can be declared unlawful and restrained by injunction against national union officials.

DECLINES POST

Washington, (AP)—Senator Fess, Republican, Ohio, Wednesday declines to accept appointment as a member of the Reed campaign funds investigating committee, to succeed Senator Goff, Republican, West Virginia, who resigned.

In declining, Senator Fess said he believed that investigations of elections should be conducted by the regular constituted standing committee of the senate, and that he was not in accord with the view of a majority of the special committee.

OLDEST LAWYER IN STATE ARGUES LOCAL CASE IN U. S. COURT

Moses Hooper, 93, Attracts Attention When He Argues Waterpower Suit

BY BASCOM TIMMONS

Washington, D. C.—A distinguished array of Wisconsin attorneys appeared in the Wisconsin waterpower case argued before the Supreme court here Tuesday.

Moses Hooper and Edward J. Dempsey of Oshkosh, appeared for the Fox River Paper company, the Patten Paper company, and the Appleton Machine company, and the Appleton Lumber company and Lumber company, who attacked the constitutionality of a clause of the Wisconsin waterpower law.

John W. Reynolds, attorney general; Hugh Minahan; Richard Drum and Adolphus K. Kannenburg, appeared for the state.

The one question presented by Mr. Hooper and Mr. Dempsey was: "Is Subsection 3 of section 31.09 of the Statutes of Wisconsin in harmony with the federal constitution?" In other words—is it competent to the legislature to require the owner of waterpower to abdicate his right to just compensation on a future taking for public use as a condition of his using the property until the taking?

The appearance of the vigorous ninety-three year old Moses Hooper before the court was a feature. Attaches said Hooper is the oldest man who has ever appeared before the high tribunal.

Chief Justice Taft leaned forward to catch every word of his statement to the court. Justice Holmes, himself 83, was especially interested.

When Hooper completed his argument and left the court room another remarkable fact became known. The oldest man ever to appear before the Supreme court drove to Washington in an automobile, coming through the mountains of West Virginia in a snow storm.

Things have changed since Mr. Hooper appeared last before the nation's highest tribunal. Chief Justice Taft, where Hooper sat when Hooper last appeared. Only Holmes, himself 83, was there but Moses Hooper, seemingly had changed little.

Veteran attaches of the court said that his gray hair and beard may be a little grayer, but that today he has the same ease of manner, the same faultless diction and possession of facts.

SURPRISE TO COURT

No man 23 years old ever before appeared in cases in the United States Supreme court. The word that he was to speak brought a crowd to the courtroom.

John W. Davis, democratic presidential nominee in 1924, was an auditor, as was Adlai Bomerne, prosecutor of the Teapot Dome case.

The always courteous Mr. Taft seemed a little more courteous to the veteran Wisconsin barrister.

Mr. Hooper spoke in the well modulated tones for which he was famous in Wisconsin courts more than a half century ago. The nine august justices were astonished at his display of memory for not once did he refer to his brief.

CARROLL COLLAPSES

ENROUTE TO PRISON

Greenville, S. C.—(AP)—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer enroute to the federal penitentiary Wednesday collapsed on the train, shortly before reaching here and was removed to a Greenville hospital.

Physicians examining Carroll said the collapse was not of a serious nature and that the producer regained consciousness before being removed to the hospital. Marshall William P. Hecht in charge of the prisoner, said the removal was made as precautionary measure because he wished to take no chances with Carroll's health.

BRITISH SHIP IS FIRED UPON BY CANTONESE

Expect Foreign Minister to Give Sharp Reply to U. S. and Britain

BULLETIN
Shanghai—(AP)—One hundred Chinese were killed and 250 were wounded in fighting resulting from further raids in the native suburbs of Shanghai Wednesday afternoon by General Chiang Kai-Shek's troops, engaged in routing out the Reds.

The casualties were mostly among the communist supporters. The shooting was plainly heard in the international settlement, causing considerable excitement. The general strike called by the red labor unions as protest against the raids, which began Tuesday, has rendered nearly 700,000 workers idle and delayed a number of Chinese-owned steamers.

Shanghai—(AP)—Word was received here Wednesday that the British gunboat Woodcock, proceeding down the Yangtze river from Hankow, had been fired on by the Chinese, presumably nationalists. The Woodcock replied with machine guns and six rounds. There were no British casualties.

A wireless message from Hankow Wednesday said that an American gunboat, the name of which was not given, had brought to Hankow a group of Americans from Chungking and Ichang.

Chinese nationalists (Cantonese) were reported to have occupied the offices of British and American tobacco companies in Wuhu, about 50 miles up the Yangtze from Nanking.

"The British cruiser Carlisle left Shanghai for Weihaiwei in Shantung, because trouble was expected there through the activities of bandits."

Hongkong reported that small groups of missionaries, mostly Americans, were arriving daily from Canton and vicinity taking refuge at Kowloon, outside Hongkong. It was not believed, however, that an outbreak was impending at Canton.

20 PICKETS KILLED

Twenty pickets of the Shanghai general labor union were killed Wednesday morning when they attacked the headquarters of General Chiang Kai-Shek's Cantonese troops in the Chap-shi district, north of the international settlement. The attackers apparently were angered by Tuesday's raids on the red labor unions ordered by Chiang.

The attack followed a procession through the district. The troops fired on the laborers, repulsing them.

EXPECT CHEN'S REPLY

Hankow—(AP)—Eugene Chen, the Cantonese foreign minister, it is understood, will reply Friday with separate communications to the five powers or note of protest against the Nanking outrages. Those powers which used guns to defend their nationals—Great Britain and the United States—will receive sharp answers, it is forecast. The understanding is that Chen will accuse them of a "wicked, uncalculated, and unprovoked" wrecking of civilian homes and killing people without cause.

Italy and France, according to the reports, will receive notes agreeing to pay damages for the losses caused to their nationals, while it is believed the reply to Japan also will be conciliatory.

GETTELMAN MAY GET FUND PROBE

Visiting Committee to Decide on Action in Prison Guard Inquiry

Madison—(AP)—The legislative visiting committee will meet Wednesday afternoon to determine what action will be taken as a result of Senator Gettelman's request for a hearing on alleged slanders remarks said to have been directed towards him by state prison guards.

In case the group decides to give the Milwaukee senator a hearing, it will probably be held Thursday night, it was said.

The charges against the senator were made by guards during an investigation at the state penitentiary at Waupun, conducted by the legislative committee. The guards said a plotting fund had been raised among them in the interests of an eight hour day and that a brother of Senator Gettelman had received the money.

Later it was said Richard Swan, Milwaukee attorney, received the money. Senator Gettelman, author of a similar bill in the upper house, declared that the testimony was a "cooked up conspiracy" and asked for a public hearing in order to clear himself.

Board of Trade Drops Armour Grain Company

Chicago—(AP)—The Armour Grain Co., the world's largest grain trading corporation, has been ordered suspended from the Chicago Board of Trade under charges of dishonest and wrongful acts.

Under the drastic order the concern which has sold as high as five million bushels of cash wheat in a day, privileges of the company as to trading through the board were ordered removed, effective Saturday.

No officers of the grain company have been suspended, but the board of trade directorate in its statement Tuesday night said such officers would be brought to trial later. John Kellogg, president of the company, said the concern has no statement to make concerning the suspension "at this time." The Armour family is understood to hold large interests in the company which was organized in 1890.

Suspension of the Armour Grain company has come at a time when the state legislature, through a special committee is investigating practices in the grain trade in Chicago.

SOLONS MAKE PROBE

It was the result of two years of investigation by the Board of Trade into the organization and subsequent wrecking of the Grain Marketing Co., an ostensibly cooperative enterprise formed by the Armour Grain Co., the Rosenbaum Grain Co., and Rosenbaum Brothers Co., with eventual control to go to farmers who were expected to buy stock in it.

Farmers, however, were apathetic toward the corporation, which after a year was dissolved. There followed charges by the Rosenbaum Grain company that the Armour Grain company had falsified its records "and deliberately set forth to cheat the grain marketing company." An arbitrator, after a year's investigation, assessed damages of $2,700,000 against the Armour Grain Co., principally in favor of the Rosenbaum concerns.

"Publicly attending the organization and dissolution of the Grain Marketing Co., prompted the state inquiry which within the past fortnight had produced testimony which it was indicated caused the board to announce the suspension now although its investigation is still under way."

LAWYER REVEALS METHODS OF "AMBULANCE CHASERS"

Milwaukee—(AP)—Further light on the methods of ambulance chasers, the case of a woman who settled a claim against the Electric company, and the relations of a doctor in personal injury cases marked the third day of the circuit court inquiry into legal abuses complained of by the Lawyers club.

Judges Charles L. Aaron, Gustav G. Gehrz and John J. Gregory setting in Judge Gregory's court room, displayed a keen interest in the testimony.

John Busch, who said that he is an investigator with headquarters in the office of Ray Cannon, was the star witness Wednesday. He was subjected to a searching examination by Hubert O. Wolfe, president of the Lawyers club.

Mr. Busch said that he had no regular office hours but worked as an investigator on personal injury and criminal cases.

When Mr. Busch said he did not go out after cases, Judge Gregory sharply remarked: "You're the only one in the courtroom who believes that."

Mr. Wolfe questioned him at length as to how soon after an accident, he called on the parties involved. Busch answered the day after, in some cases. Mr. Busch admitted that in about three cases he had got the signatures of persons to contracts to employ Mr. Cannon.

The courtroom was tense when Attorney Wolfe put this question: "Did you ever carry about with you newspaper clippings of accounts of the amount of damages recovered by your office. Think carefully before you answer."

"I have carried them around, but not for the purpose of exhibiting them to persons I was seeing," he answered.

"Did you ever exhibit them?" he was asked.

After a moment's hesitation, Mr. Busch said: "Yes, I guess I have."

Questioned concerning whether he had ever given any sort of advice to parties that he had called upon, Mr. Busch admitted that perhaps he had, but quickly added: "It all depended upon who I was talking to and the turn the conversation took."

He admitted that he had recently made an investigation of a railroad accident in Kenosha and had seen the parties concerned. He didn't remember the name.

AVERT ELECTRIC EMPLOYEES' STRIKE

Attempt to Get Pardon for Milwaukee Motorman Calms 6,000 Workers

Milwaukee—(AP)—With District Attorney Eugene Wengert in Madison, conferring with Governor Fred R. Zimmerman relative to a pardon for Peter Tabor, 27, motorman, who was convicted of fourth degree manslaughter after his street car had collided with a fire department truck and killed Captain John Trier, it was revealed that a strike of 6,000 employees of the Milwaukee Electric Co. had narrowly been averted when Tabor was sentenced to prison for a year.

Indignant that Tabor had been held criminally liable by a jury in municipal court, street car men demanded a demonstration of protest and a walkout was averted only by efforts of leaders of the Employees Mutual Benefit association and officials of the company.

Had the strike materialized, Milwaukee would have been without street car service, light, power and heat, and interurban lines would have been tied up.

Visited by a committee of employees, the district attorney consented to take up with the governor the question of a pardon for Tabor.

TOBACCO TAX BILL IS VOTED DOWN, 47-36

Measure Indefinitely Postponed—Nearly 5 Million Tax Involved

Madison—(AP)—Tax exemption of leaf tobacco stored in warehouses, asked in Assemblyman A. E. Smith's bill, was denied by the state assembly Wednesday when the measure was indefinitely postponed, 47 to 36. Considerable debate preceded vote on the bill.

Assemblyman Baker declared that nearly one-fourth of the assessed value of property in Rock-co was in tobacco and that tax should be paid on the crop where it is. Another opponent of the bill, Assemblyman Reis, declared that it would take $4,750,000 from the tax roll of the state. The burden would then go to some one else, he said.

The author of the bill said he "realized that when a person had the temerity to appear before a legislative body with a measure of benefit to the farmers, he is generally turned down."

In view of the recent victory won by the Northern Wisconsin Cooperative tobacco pool, Mr. Smith said, the legislature should be proud to help the tobacco growers and farmers and give them at least part of a square deal.

FARMERS AGAINST PLAN

Assemblyman Hanson, joining with opponents, declared that he had talked with tobacco growers and farmers and they were not in favor of the exemption bill. Assemblyman Ellenbecker said the body recently passed exemption for goods stored in commercial warehouses and "as much should be done for the farmers."

Opponents also advanced the argument that exemption of tobacco stored in warehouses would not be of much benefit to the farmers, since by that time the crop has passed out of their ownership.

After Assemblyman Withrow had declared that his substitute amendment to the bill, making Nov. 21 a complete legal holiday, would make the day a holiday only in public schools and had declared that its purpose was "not to glorify war, but to recognize the beginning of a new era of peace," the bill was ordered to a third reading.

The senate bill, appropriating $1,500,000 as an emergency amount to the state board of bar examiners, was passed. Several other measures of lesser importance were also given final approval.

12 ARRESTED IN RAID BY PROHIBITION SQUAD

Madison—(AP)—Descending suddenly into "Little Sicily," or the "bush" section of Madison, last Tuesday, 21 officers arrested ten women and two men charged with illegal sale of illicit liquor. The raid was one of the largest here in two years.

Six more men are sought on the warrants which were issued just previous to the raid. All those arrested were charged with one or two sales of liquor, after special district attorney's detectives had obtained the evidence in two weeks work in the "bush" and "bar" raids. The raids were, for the most part, without opposition. In one place the officers were forced to kick down a door. One of those arrested was Mrs. Peter Labrux, wife of the man who loaned Superior Judge O. A. Stolen money. The man was one of the three that brought disbarment proceedings against the judge. Officers were looking for her husband, following her arrest.

PROBE DISAPPEARANCE OF WISCONSIN YOUTH

Chicago—(AP)—Disappearance of Vernon Fuller 15, from the farm home of his uncle Sylvan Hall near Wisconsin Rapids last July has resulted in an investigation of the mysterious disappearance. Sheriff Lynn Wright of Juneau-co. is in Chicago to question Mrs. Sylvia Des Boullions Rehn, who worked at the Hall farm at the time of the boy's disappearance.

Vernon Fuller was last seen on a Saturday afternoon in July. He, according to Sheriff Wright, was left on Sylvan Hall's farm in care of the farmer's wife, Minnie, a sister of the boy's mother. Hall objected to the boy being there, the sheriff said, but finally gave in when the boy disappeared he had worked for board and keep and $1 now and then for spending money.

"The boys mother told me had written faithfully every two weeks until the time he disappeared," the sheriff said. "The letters ceased abruptly with his disappearance."

Berres was struck by an automobile on Capitol square Tuesday night, Assemblyman Frederick Hoffmann, about the motion in the lower house Wednesday calling for the appointment of a committee to confer with city officials relative to the traffic situation in Madison.

Speaker John W. Eder named Assemblymen Hoffmann, Spott and Peterson on the committee, and the group will confer with Chief of Police Trostle and Mayor Schmiedeman.

Several weeks ago the assembly adopted a resolution by Assemblyman Spott, asking officials to stop "race track" conditions about the square. Motorists slowed up and the same house adopted another resolution thanking city officials for their cooperation in reducing the menace. Assemblyman Berres was not seriously injured.

The storm came from the northwest with little or no warning just after dark, according to survivors. Few buildings were left standing as the tornado howled on into the blackness.

Fire broke out soon after and the postoffice and a restaurant, two of the shops still withstanding the wind, were burned.

Relief workers, including physicians and nurses from San Antonio and Kerville and a detachment of troops from Fort Clark, were delayed in arriving with aid on account of storm damaged roads.

After the tornado passed two women, neighbors for many years, lay side by side. One on the verge of unconsciousness asked: "Are you sleeping well?" "I'll be sleeping in a minute."

She died with the last word and her companion lapsed into unconsciousness.

MASS OF RUINS

San Antonio, Texas—(AP)—A mass of wrecked buildings today marked the site of Rock Springs, county seat of Edwards-co, Tuesday night in a tornado that virtually wiped out the town. A severe electrical storm followed the tornado, hampering rescue work and adding to the suffering of the injured.

Scores of volunteer rescue workers were enroute to the devastated area Wednesday morning to operate under the supervision of American Red Cross representatives. A detachment of cavalry was ordered to Fort St. Louis. All telephone lines of Rock Springs were severed when the tornado struck about 8:30 Tuesday night. A lineman succeeded in tapping a wire about a mile from town and sent the first call for aid. First reports said the majority of the 800 residents were dead or injured.

The telephone lines were strung on a temporary station and Gladys Lowery, the town's telephone operator, worked throughout the severe electrical storm to get relief calls through to nearby towns.

Started from Fort Clark Tuesday night and was expected to arrive today to take over police duties. Fort Clark is fifty miles from Rock Springs. A Red Cross special train with nurses and doctors was made up here under orders of the middlewestern Red Cross headquarters at St. Louis. Relief Workers Rushed to Rock Springs, Texas, to Aid Stricken

TOWN IS LAID IN RUINS

Twister Is Most Disastrous in History of Region—Many Mexicans Die

Rock Springs, Texas—(AP)—A tornado that struck this inland town Tuesday night took a toll of at least 62 lives and injured about 150 persons, some fatally. The twister was the most disastrous in this section of the state. Sixty-two bodies had been recovered from the ruins of the town before noon Wednesday, 33 of which had been identified.

Of the injured, 29 were expected to die before night. Most of the unidentified dead were Mexicans.

Relief workers took possession of the town early Wednesday morning, most were arriving. The town was hatched into ruins in a few minutes by the twister from the northeast, which razed all except a few buildings roaring down a two mile path.

The usual arid pranks of the "twister" were in evidence. A baby was hurled 50 feet through the air and landed safely about 200 yards. K. Newell, an automobile salesman, in the midst of the rush, rushed into the splintering Valentine hotel to save who ever he might. He continued to extricate dying and wounded after the hotel was in ruins.

CIGARET TAX BILL IS DEBATED IN SENATE

Madison—(AP)—The senate will take its turn at discussing cigarette Wednesday, following several discussions in the lower house, when it will review Senator Treadwell's tax bill.

The bill, which is before the committee on taxation, would ask for a 1 cent tax on the popular priced package of cigarettes. The measure has met with disfavor among drug store and amusement parlor proprietors.

Senator H. H. Smith's bill, providing for a state narcotic law with penalties, will be up before the committee on education and public welfare. The measure would enact a state law similar to the federal law.

Special highway investigating committee's bill to abolish the present highway commission and provide for a new full time commission will be reviewed for the first time before the joint highway committee.

As might be expected, petting appears to increase manytimes with the approach of spring. Warm breezes and moonlight nights stir the blood of the lovesick swain and his hero worshipping girl, with the result that police are encountered with more than ordinary traffic problems.

So rather than take the chance of being arrested for disorderly conduct, petters are advised to do their petting somewhere outside the city limits. To do so will be a lot safer, according to Chief Prim.

BOY POPULATION OF APPLETON IS 1,400

Survey Is Conducted by Boys Work Secretary of Local Y. M. C. A.

Appleton has a boy population, between the ages of 10 and 18, of about 1,400, according to a survey made by John W. Fugh, boys work secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Of this number, 400 are members of the association and a total of 600 boys are being served by Mr. Fugh and his assistants, Irving Buck, Fond du Lac, and Edward Blessman, Appleton, Lawrence college freshmen.

The survey was made in connection with a statement made at Geneva, Switzerland, by E. M. Robinson, head of the boys' work staff of the Y. M. C. A. world committee. Mr. Robinson said that more boys are born every day than there are boy members in associations throughout the world, emphasizing the need for larger service by organizations serving boys and youths. Of the approximately 1,550,000 world-wide Y. M. C. A. membership, some 450,000 are boys.

"When you sit in church on Sunday morning do you realize that there were more than 3,000,000 boys born in the last week?" Mr. Robinson asked in his talk. The boys population of the world he said, includes more than 20,000,000 Mohammedans, scattered in more than 20 countries; 90,000,000 boys in Asia, more than half the boy population of the world; 19,000,000 negro boys, of whom more than 1,000,000 are in North America; 64,000,000 Caucasian boys, among whom 17,000,000 are classed as protestants, 12,000,000 as orthodox (all forms) and 27,000,000 as Roman catholics.

ASSEMBLY BUCKLES DOWN TO WORK AFTER WEEK'S RELAXATION

Twelve Bills Win Approval and Three Are Indefinitely Postponed

Madison—(AP)—After its period of comparative relaxation during the spring election week, the assembly buckled down early to its Monday-to-Friday term and in its Monday night and Tuesday morning session cleared the decks of formalities that attend each bill.

Six measures were ordered engrossed and re-referred to committees or otherwise advanced a long their enactment route during the snappy Monday night session. Three measures were killed and twelve passed.

The three bills given the death knell in the form of indefinite postponements were:

The Coleman measure extending the state insurance fund to allow insurance of private property.

The Rees bill raising the salary of town assessors and members of boards of tax review.

Practically all of the measures passed were of minor or local nature, but included in the list were:

The Duncan bill adding space above and below streets to the list of properties that cities may order used for railway purposes.

The Koenig bill giving town boards and county highway commissions more power in compelling the erection and maintenance of snow fences.

The bill by Assemblyman Hall increasing from $1,400 to $1,500 the maximum average annual earnings for employees under the workmen's compensation act.

Tuesday's morning session brought a request from the assembly for an attorney general's opinion on the constitutionality of the assembly bill setting an eight-hour day for policemen. It was pointed out by Assemblyman Duman, Milwaukee, author of the motion asking for the opinion, that the bill, if passed, might violate the home-rule amendment.

The assembly refused to reconsider the Bauman bill allowing municipalities to set up rate schedules on their own municipal water plant service. It had been engrossed.

A long debate preceded adoption of the Tews joint resolution asking congress to call a constitutional convention for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Assemblymen E. G. Smith, Baker, Edwards, and Grandine spoke vigorously against the resolution, while the author and assemblymen Baumann, Schauer, Peterson, and Coleman were leaders for the proposal.

The lower house then indefinitely postponed a joint resolution by Assemblyman Kienner, seeking to change the methods by which the state constitution is amended.

A bill to add highway and bridge work to the list of occupations to which the eight-hour day law applies met the same fate as did the Ingalls bill relating to licensing agents for certain types of insurance.

Along with the two Coleman bills allowing establishments of local free employment offices and providing for labeling of all state-owned cars the following were among the bills passed:

The senate bill taking the power of appointment of special highway police from the hands of county sheriffs and placing it in the hands of the county highway committees.

The senate bill by Markham, striking out the ten thousand dollar limit on bond that may be issued by counties for road building and leaving the only requirement "constitutional limitation and indebtedness."

MISSION C'LUB PICKS DELEGATE TO CONFERENCE

Mrs. Roger Bond was elected delegate to the spring presbytery to be held April 26 and 27 at Marshfield at the regular meeting of the Women's Missionary society of Memorial Presbyterian church Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Wood, 741 E. Johnson. Twenty members attended.

Miss Carla Heller sang a group of Negro spirituals and Mrs. Richard Pugh had charge of the devotions. Miss Wood led the home mission topic on Race Problems in the United States. The foreign topic, Mohammedanism in Africa, was read by Mrs. Roger Bond and Mrs. Virgil B. Scott. A social was held following the business meeting.

MRS. PETERSEN REELECTED HEAD OF WOMAN'S UNION

Mrs. E. J. Petersen was reelected president of the Woman's union of First Baptist church and Mrs. E. M. Salter was reelected vice president at the annual meeting of the union Tuesday afternoon in the church parlors. Other officers elected were Mrs. Carl Bost, secretary, and Mrs. Glen Meidam, treasurer.

Reports were given and it was reported that the union had raised $1600 during the year, most of which will be turned into the building fund. Reorganization of groups will take place at the next meeting on the first Tuesday in May. Forty-three women attended the meeting Tuesday afternoon.

HINT SETTLEMENT IN BANK TAX CASE

Mayor Names Committee to Confer With Bankers Over Refund of Taxes

First steps to settle the bank stock tax trouble in Appleton were taken at an informal meeting of the new common council Tuesday night. Mayor A. C. Tule said local banks have intimated they would settle the suits on the income tax basis for the last five years. This probably means that the banks will agree that the city return an amount equal to that which could have been collected during the five years had they been taxed on an income basis. The balance of the illegal collections would be refunded.

Approximately $180,000 is due the Appleton banks, according to Mayor Tule and this means that by electing an immediate settlement on the income tax basis the city will save between $50,000 and $70,000. The mayor appointed a committee composed of Alderman George T. Richard, chairman of the finance committee, Alfred C. Boser, city attorney, and himself to confer with the bankers and to arrange some basis of settlement and report at the first regular meeting of the new council next Wednesday evening.

LAND OWNER ASKS $925 DAMAGES FROM MAN WHO SOLD LOT

Leon M. LeRoux Accuses W. A. Koepke of Misrepresenting Lot Boundary

Alleging misrepresentation of facts and damage to his property, Leon M. LeRoux, Appleton, is suing William A. Koepke, Appleton, for $925, and is seeking a court order restraining the defendant from encroaching on property which the plaintiff claims he owns. The case opened Tuesday morning in the higher branch of municipal court before Judge Theodore Berg.

The question of ownership of a strip of land approximately six feet wide resulted in the litigation. On June 12, 1924, the plaintiff bought some property from the defendant and next to more property owned by the defendant, according to the complaint.

When the sale was made, the defendant pointed out the property lines to the plaintiff, and the latter, believing the representations to be true, completed the transaction, it is alleged. Later the defendant learned that the property lines represented by him were not correct, the plaintiff alleges. As a result, Mr. LeRoux was obliged to remove a garage and driveway which he had built, as part of the garage and driveway were located on property of a neighbor on the other side of the plaintiff's property, the complaint states. It was the misrepresentation on the part of the defendant that caused the plaintiff to encroach six feet on his neighbor's property, he alleges.

Damage to the plaintiff of $500 was caused in removing his driveway and garage, he alleges.

On July 15, 1926, it is alleged the defendant broke down a fence which the plaintiff claims was on his property, damaging the latter to the extent of $25, he holds. Charging that the defendant has threatened to break down the fence again if it is rebuilt, the plaintiff is seeking and restraining Mr. Koepke from carrying out such action.

The defendant also is charged with having filled in his property with dirt so that his land is higher than the plaintiff's. Several drain ditches leading from the higher to the lower land make the latter property unfit for use in the spring of the year, it is alleged. Damages of $200 are sought by the plaintiff on this ground.

A complete denial of the charges is made by the defendant.

The jury consists of Henry Einfeldt, 1500 W. Rogers-ave Earl Ralph, 1202 N. Union-st; Joe Schiffer, 511 E. Pacific-st; George Miller, 312 N. Oneida-st; J. Fumal, 1014 N. ENGINEER COMPLETES COUNTY HIGHWAY MAP

A new map of the county highway system, the first since April, 1923, has been hung in the office of the county highway commission. It measures about 8 feet square, and was drawn by Frank N. Charlesworth, Jr., Kaukauna.

All the highways are colored to show the material they are made of. Black indicates concrete, red represents macadam, gravel is shown by yellow, and the green colored roads are of tar. A solid line indicates the road is a state or federal highway. A checked lined represents a county road.

The map probably is the clearest and most complete this commission ever has had, it is said.

WON'T HIRE MOTORCOPS FOR ANOTHER WEEK

County motorcycle officers probably will not be appointed by the highway commission until after the new county board is organized next week, it is reported at the office of the highway commission.

That the positions are much sought after is indicated by the fact that 15 applications already are on file in the highway office. A few more no doubt will be received before the appointments are made.

The county employed three motorcycle officers last year, and it is not believed likely that this number will be changed now. The salary was $165 a month, but the officers had to furnish their own machines and pay for their own repairs. Gasoline and oil was furnished by the county.

KEEP DIGGING TO WIN SUCCESS, "Y" LEADER TELLS CLUB

Financial Director for Association Talks to Y's Mens Club

Six inches from success was the subject of a talk given Monday evening by C. F. Coykendall, secretary of the financial bureau of the national Y. M. C. A., at the regular meeting of the Y's Mens' club at the association. Mr. Coykendall is in Appleton to direct the $35,000 campaign of the local association which starts next week. George F. Werner was in charge of the program.

Mr. Coykendall illustrated his talk by references to the story of the African mines, and the Cobalt mines in Canada, where the owners had become discouraged after hard digging had revealed nothing. They sold the mines for a few dollars and the new owners dug only from six to nine inches to discover the some of the greatest riches of the world. Mr. Coykendall urged his listeners to dig the last six inches.

Many persons are not willing to pay the price of the last six inches to win success he said. They do willingly and well what is mapped out for them but will not step out farther for themselves. They fail to see the bigger side of the job, seeing only their present position, and so do not work for future success. Mr. Coykendall concluded.

Mr. Adrian H. Kemps who is employed at the Appleton Cooled Paper company, spent Monday April 11 in Milwaukee on business.

Thursday, April 14—the Natal Day

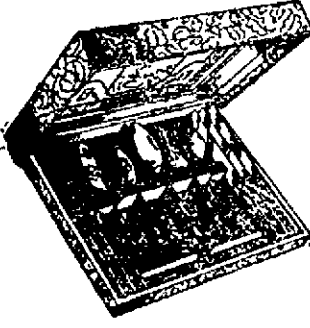

Twenty-five years ago on the 14th day of April, Mr. James C. Penney started a general dry goods store in a small mining camp in the mountains of Wyoming. There was nothing pretentious about this little retail shop; Mr. Penney had the urgent needs of the present to think about rather than spending his time in visioning the future.

Thursday of this week! April 14th! Just a quarter of a century has passed! Instead of the one little shop, there are 773 J. C. Penney Company Department Stores scattered over 46 states. In all these Stores, Thursday will be Founder's Day!

Facts are Loud Speakers

The efficiency of an organization may be measured by its wage and tax statistics. Facts are loud speakers.

During the ten years ending Dec. 31, 1926, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) paid $444,400,000 in wages to its employees.

In addition, the management has provided such agencies as the Stock Purchase Plan, the Death Benefit Plan and the Annuity Plan, all of which have a very definite money value to the individual and entail a corresponding expense on the part of the Company.

Employees of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) are contented, well-paid workers. They are able to carry on their work in loyal, whole-hearted fashion because they have been given practical proof that the Company is interested in their welfare and is quick to reward their effort and ability.

A labor bill of more than 444 million dollars for a ten year period is part of the statistical record of the service of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). It gives some idea of the actual work required of this organization to supply the petroleum needs of the people of the Middle West.

For the same period, taxes paid into the treasuries of the Federal, State, County and Municipal Governments by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) amounted to more than $122,000,000, or nearly 28% of its total labor bill.

It is apparent that in an industry where labor constitutes a large percentage of the cost of operation as it does in the oil business, an organization which pays a tax of nearly 28% of its total labor cost is doing full duty as a loyal citizen.

The tax and wage statistics of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) for the last ten years—over 122 millions in taxes, over 444 millions in wages—proclaim this Company an ably-managed, efficient organization.

During all of these years the management of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has held the faith that satisfactory profits are an inevitable reward of essential service honestly rendered. The operation of this business has been, and is, based upon such service.

During all of these years, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has waged a ceaseless war against waste, applying science and common sense to everyday problems, following the principles of fairness, justice and equity to all—to the worker—to the competitor—to the customer.

Today the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) occupies an enviable position in the foremost ranks of America's largest institutions of service, and it enjoys the respect and esteem of all with whom it comes in contact.

ANOTHER NUISANCE TAX

There is a proposal before the legislature to tax the gross receipts of moving picture and other theaters. The tax is four per cent. It is insignificant so far as it affects the individual, and doubtless it would be paid without in any way diminishing theater patronage. It is argued by some that it would be a burden on the theater-going public, particularly those of the less well-to-do class who get their amusement largely from attending moving picture theaters. With this view we do not agree. If any person is financially able to attend a moving picture theater, he is also able to pay a nominal tax.

We think, however, that the bill is objectionable on other grounds. In the first place, it singles out a business for special taxation. In the second place the tax is not needed. And in the third place, it is a nuisance tax. This newspaper believes in a sales tax, provided it is generally and scientifically applied. It should not be employed, however, unless it is to replace those taxes which now are passed on to consumers either doubled or trebled. In other words, we should not have it at all. Gasoline and certain internal taxes of the federal government are exceptions. They rest on a different basis. There are plenty of individual commodities on which Wisconsin could levy a sales tax, but to single out one or two or even several would be discrimination and, as we have said, the imposition of a nuisance tax for which there is no emergency and no necessity. Instead of trying to devise new ways of increasing taxes, Wisconsin should seek to find ways of reducing them.

FRAUDULENT MOTOR OILS

A number of state legislatures have shown great interest this year in protecting motorists and reputable oil dealers against frauds in the sale of automobile oils, according to a report just issued by the American Fair Trade association. Bills making it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment or both, to sell to a motorist, without his knowledge, an oil different from the oil he orders, have been introduced in nine states and have become laws in some. Last year New York state enacted such a law.

Desiring uniformity in oil legislation, the association conferred with automobile club officials, state sealers of weights and measures, leading oil manufacturers and service station proprietors, and has evolved a model bill which will be introduced in the legislatures of all states during the next two years.

The bill provides that it shall be unlawful for any dealer to substitute any oil for an asked brand without the purchaser's knowledge of such substitution; that it shall be unlawful to display any can or drum on which is displayed any trade mark which is not the distinctive designation of the oil within the container; that it will be unlawful to display any sign or label which describes any lubricating oil for internal combustion engines not actually on sale at the place of business where the sign is displayed.

Modern internal combustion engines have become such delicate precision instruments that proper oil is as essential. Motor manufacturers have experimented with their products and designate the kind of oil best suited for their motors. The average motorist buying oil along the highway, will have no protection against substitution of inferior lubricants unless stringent laws are enacted.

REFORESTATION IN MICHIGAN

Michigan has taken up reforestation in a substantial and promising way. In quite a number of its counties large tracts have been planted with young trees, and the acreage is rapidly increasing. Some fifteen years ago experiments were made along this line in the upper part of the lower peninsula, and they met with such success the movement has been gradually spreading ever since. Now the state is considering legislation which will encourage reforestation on a vast scale. Michigan is not only concerned with a reproduction of its timber supply, and the salvaging of millions of acres of barren, non-tax-yielding lands, but with protecting and developing its $200,000,000 annual income from tourists. It realizes that its future prosperity is dependent on reforestation.

It has taken more than a generation to convince that great lumbering state that the denuding of its timber lands without replenishing them was a mistake. Had it reached this conclusion twenty-five or thirty years ago, it would be nearing the day when it could cash in on its foresight. The policy of wholesale neglect which followed in the train of the rich lumbering period is now seen to have been a grievous mistake. Exactly that much time has been lost. The potential resources of the state would have been hundreds of millions of dollars greater than they are today. Its physical appearance improved and tax revenue producing property increased.

All that applies to Michigan of course applies to Wisconsin. Our interests and problems in this respect are identical. Michigan has shown more initiative than has this state, but it is to be hoped the amendment of the constitution to permit deferred taxation on lands reforested will hasten tree planting on an extensive scale in Wisconsin. If private interests are unwilling to engage in reforestation, the state itself can do so with sure profit in the end. One thing is certain; if states like Wisconsin and Michigan are to keep up with the procession and capitalize their resources for the most, they must renew their forests on lands particularly adaptable to that purpose and of no use for anything else.

DR. SHAW'S VACATION

Dr. Charles Gray Shaw, professor of philosophy and Butler lecturer on comparative religion at New York university, has been granted a leave of absence for a year during which he will take a unique vacation in the New York City slums. His conception of a sabbatical year is a year that will benefit the academic mind and instruct an intelligence that has been for so long teaching intelligence.

Dr. Shaw is going to study the slums from a housing angle, and will serve as secretary to the National Housing committee during the term of his leave. He hopes to evolve some new ideas concerning housing, its causes and its remedies. It is his belief that the housing problem of the slums is one to which cities have fallen heir naturally, as the result of industrial and social conditions, the economic result being such that the poor are forced to live in cast-off dwellings and outlaid apartments and tenement buildings. It will be necessary for the cities to solve this problem in their own way, he believes, and take up the problem of housing just as they do with the questions of educating, transporting and governing the populace.

Professor Shaw's plan is novel and adventurous. It is something new. Instead of spending his vacation year in other lands, or in relaxation he chooses, instead to spend it in a way that tends toward a great public good. For 27 years Professor Shaw has been teaching comparative religions and now he is going to get a first hand insight into still another religion, the religion of necessity that requires poor people to live in an abject poverty that is inexcusable in this era of plenty.

MIGRAINE BY VARIOUS OTHER NAMES
 Migraine is otherwise known as migraine, periodic sick headache, hemigrana, biliousness, blind staggers or mad staggers. The victim has a right to feel mad. A blind area at one side of the center of vision often occurs with scintillating or "fortification" flashes of light or spectra as a warning signal of onset. But the migraine sufferer has no just cause for complaint. Migraine is a warning signal to him or liver disturbances or to any fault of the stomach or digestion. Not all one-sided headaches, with the visual disturbances and nausea or vomiting, are migraine, and not all migraine is one-sided, concludes Dr. Edward F. Hartung, from a study of 50 cases of migraine in a group of 250 cases in which headache was the chief complaint.

There is a clear indication of hereditary influence in migraine. The heredity follows the Mendelian law of inheritance and study of this feature by Buchanan in the Mayo clinic led this investigator to the conclusion that the tendency toward migraine is as innate as the color of hair or fatness. Students of this common yet baffling disorder have always regarded as a neurosis or rather a psychoneurosis, similar to epilepsy, tic (habit spasm), true hysteria, and neurosthenia (whatever this may be). This view envisages the patient's constitution or family history as neurotic, that is, predisposed to disorders of the nervous system. Indeed grandpa's hysteria—for grandfathers do have true hysteria—or mother's fondness for alcoholic "stimulants"—for folk fond of intoxicating narcotics still like to call them "stimulants"—many manifest itself in the neurotic family history in the form of epilepsy in one child, migraine in another, or some peculiarity or instability which passes as "neurosthenia" in still a third.

A neurosis is any disorder of the nervous system which has no apparent or discernible organic cause nothing discoverable by physical or special examination or by postmortem investigation to account for the disorder. Epilepsy is a motor neurosis; neurosthenia and hysteria are sympathetic neurosis; migraine is a sensory neurosis.

If any of these psychoneuroses or neuroses occur in your family don't feel sensitive about it. If any family can show many such cases, it is a family trait, and it is not a disease. It is a family trait, and it is not a disease. It is a family trait, and it is not a disease.

Well, we have said enough to make almost any poor but honest victim of migraine a little ashamed of his trouble, and that is precisely what we have said it for.

There is a saving, invented by the late Dr. Biggs, New York state health commissioner, that "public health is purchasable." Personal health is not purchasable but within reasonable limitations it is attainable, and on this premise a community should feel no more ashamed of an excessive mortality rate, whether from pipeless stoves or from neglect of sanitary rules regarding water supply or sewage disposal, than an individual should feel about preventable impairments of his own health.

If you and I are born with a neurotic family which manifests itself in your case as hysteria and mine as epilepsy or migraine, is there nothing we can do about it as individuals to ameliorate or improve our condition? Watch this column and we shall see.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Diabetes Not Inherited
 Is diabetes hereditary? At the age of 34 have developed a very severe case. Always been very active. (Mrs. R.)
 Answer—No, directly, though in about one-fifth of all cases, a complete family history is available. An ancestor of the patient has had diabetes. Perhaps a poor quality of pancreas gland tissue is inherited, and hence when there is a known history of diabetes in the family it behooves descendants to take particular care to avoid the usual predisposing cause of diabetes, which are overeating and obesity.

LIBRARY ADVENTURES

A PANORAMA OF NEW YORK

Most of us have seen a photographer taking a picture of a large convention, hundreds of people banked against a building. By the aid of an automatic mechanism, the camera slowly revolves in a long arc, its all-seeing eye following the line of people and registering their faces on the negative. The result is a panorama photograph.

Before this particular device was invented a panorama picture could only be taken in sections artificially joined together. Now the photograph is a complete fusion of the parts, with all joints eliminated.

For the first time in American literature, so far as I know, an attempt has been made to take a fictional panorama photograph of the city of New York. Felix Riesenberg, in "East Side, West Side," a novel published in January, has attempted to register on his novel-negative not a section of New York, not merely the Ghetto or Fifth Avenue, not Greenwich Village or the Chinese section, but all of them. He pointed his camera at one end of the line and slowly and carefully made it follow the entire panorama. The result was meant to be the first complete picture of New York in fiction.

The individual parts have been portrayed in novels many times. Innumerable writers have laid the scenes of their stories in the fashionable centers of the city, or in the slums, or in one of the dozen distinct cities that in reality make up this one enormous city. Many also have jumped across boundaries, transferring their scenes from the homes of the rich to the homes of the poor. Some have even caught in their picture several of the distinct New Yorks.

What Felix Riesenberg has attempted in "East Side, West Side" is different from all that. In the case of other writers whose stories covered several sections of New York, the scenes where the story is laid were incidental. In Riesenberg's book the scene is the one thing that counts. New York city is the hero of the book; the human characters are incidental.

To get all of New York into the picture he has restored to a somewhat artificial device. But a photograph is always artificial. He takes a little boy whose home is on a Hudson river boat but who is the illegitimate son of a wealthy citizen, has the boat sunk so the boy has to swim for his life, lands him in the Ghetto and makes him live the life of that crowded section. They boy is a fighter and lands in the prize ring of the Brewery, giving the author the chance to describe that part of the panorama of New York. His own father, a boyish enthusiast, becomes interested in him, finally discovering his identity. The boy works himself up, learns to read and write, rises in the social scale; at each step the author adds a section to his panorama picture. The boy's personal fortunes are used by Riesenberg to register the photograph of the city.

Through the influence of the rich father the boy is sent to Columbia, and there follows a photograph of the academic life of New York. He becomes a civil engineer, and the author registers a vivid picture of the engineering operations in the Catskill: that provided New York with its water supply.

Gradually the boy makes his way farther and farther into the fashionable section of the city. His relationship with his wealthy unavowed father and his engagement to his father's ward give Riesenberg a chance to describe the New York of fashion. The device he has employed is singularly complete—much more complete than it could possibly be in real life. In the end the human loves and hates count for nothing. The little boy, now a famous engineer, turns his back on the world of fashion, after the author has had a chance to describe it through him, and goes back to the east side to wipe out the slums and replace them with a wholesome city.

"East Side, West Side" is an unusual book. Holes can easily be picked in it as a novel but as a picture of New York it is the only one of its kind.

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York.—The whole complexion of New York changed with the coming of spring's first warm winds. To a stranger these changes may not be apparent, but once you tread Fifth Avenue upon a Sunday morning and see the curbs lined with folk waiting for the bus ride—just just down in your notebook that it's time to look for other symptoms.

Grab the bus and journey to the Hudson's bank! The bet is 20 to 1 that it will be packed with a giant parade of men, women and children with that wistful look of the trapped in their eyes.

You can catch it in Broadway! Something a bit feverish has been caught in the air. Crowds, drawn out by the pleasant weather, are straining to bridge that last short period before they leave town for the country or before the theaters close during the hot season. The managers are making their last plunge, hoping against hope for a last minute success before the season officially closes.

The East side begins to move out of doors. Groups stand hatless upon the sidewalk and the streets begin to cluster with youngsters. Baby carriages congest traffic and there is a sputter of voices as the windows begin to open up.

The railroad stations see the first symptoms of the coming crush and business men begin to consult time-tables. Incoming trains bring the mob of early visitors, and along the waterfront, the piers echo the noises of outgoing steamers.

The answers to all this is simple: the city is beginning to take its mind off itself. That is a characteristic of a metropolis. The millions caught within its vice-like grip seek to turn their minds in other directions at the slightest opportunity.

Broadway is getting quite a gleetle out of this gag just now. A youth appeared at an office looking for a job. The office manager, looking him over, was a bit perplexed. The lad seemed to talk with a brogue, and yet he had a name of Semitic cast. "Say, son, what are you—an Irishman or a Jew?"

"I'm darned if I know," came the reply. "You see I've been ushering for five years at 'Able's Irish Rose.'"

A place just off Broadway that used to specialize in the sharpening of safety razor blades displays in its window a sign reading:

"Refilling station for all makes of automatic lighters. Repairing also done."

And they tell me he is doing a rushing business.

It is known as Broadway's costliest plaything.

In mid-theater season last winter a gold-plated coupon clipping sent, with certain theories concerning the fate of souls after death, had a young playwright write a play. He announced that, if it cost him a million, he would keep the play going until its propaganda had spread among thousands of playgoers. With in a couple of months the play had taken a couple of hundred thousand dollars. A recent check of the season's plays showed this production to have enjoyed one of the "longest runs of any play put on this year. Yet it is, doubtless, the hardest loss taken on the big street in many a year. It is not unlikely that the banker has dropped a million or more to get his idea over—presuming, of course, that he converted any percentage of the audiences.

The Bunker Hill Monument Association, the membership of which was $5; an engraved diploma was their certificate; their names were engraved on the parchment records deposited in the corner stone. The corner stone was laid by Lafayette on June 17th, 1825. The last stone was raised during the morning of July 23d, 1842, in the presence of the officers of the Bunker Hill Monument Association and a few other spectators. The work had to be stopped several times on the structure because of the lack of funds. The approximate cost was about $120,000.

Q. Are more men entering the teaching profession now than formerly?
 C. E.

A. In 1876, 42.3 per cent of public school teachers were men. In 1925, 16.9 per cent. Each decade between these dates shows a consistent decrease.

New comers develop an expression of astonishment!

When, on their first visit here, they see such saving of time, money and decision.

If 5 minutes mean more to you than 5 dollars—or if it's the other way around—you are at home here.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

A PLAIN DIRT FARMER

BY ARTHUR N. PACK

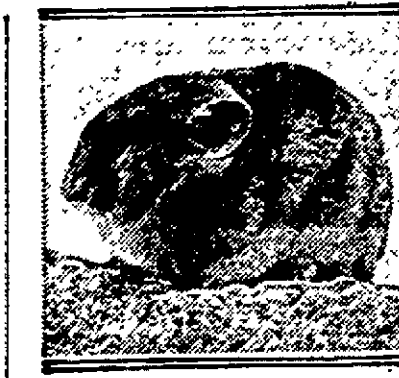

President, American Nature Ass'n.
 No thoughts of relief measures in the way of legislation trouble the head of this little farmer, who is not such a "dumbunny" as he looks.

He just goes quietly about his business and does his haying in season, although where he farms it is not so easy a matter to lay in supplies to last all through the long hard winter, for he lives way up above the timber-line on the high mountains of the west.

So near the color of the rocks among which he dwells is he, that only sharp eyes detect this pretty little animal. The rock slides are his home, in a country where snow covers his home for many months he must gather a harvest and insure a food supply, for he does not sleep the long winter days away.

In August he gets busy—it is haying time in Conyard. Out in the grassy meadows he may be seen at work, just a little rabbit-like creature about the size of a guinea pig. He nips off the grass and other herbage and bundles it up and carries it to the rocks. Here he spreads it out on the rocks to cure.

When he decides that the hay is red clover blossom the next ready to store away he stacks it up in regular little haystacks in the shelter of the rocks. If some accident happens and his hay becomes dampened, he spreads it out again and dries it. Stacks of hay as large as a bushel basket have been found that these industrious little farmers have stacked away.

In this hay thirty different varieties of flowers and grasses were counted. Perhaps Cony's taste is for a dried daisy blossom desert one day, and a rocks to cure.

Folson's bathing companions had been ROGER NEVILLE, a business partner; MRS. HELEN BARNABY and CARMELITA VALDON.

ANASTASIA FOLSON, eccentric and masterful sister of the dead man, arrives and takes command, and it is established that one CROYDON SEARS is a fancier of curious weapons. Sears admits buying two knives but not the pichu.

Anastasia engages TITUS RIGGS, an architect, to work on the case. Dan Polton, Folson's nephew, arrives and is puzzled by the curious French dolls in his uncle's rooms.

Croydon Sears sends for ELEMING STONE, famous detective. He tells him Folson had been black mailing him and he had lied at the inquest but was innocent. Stone meets others of the circle, including NED BARRON and his wife, MADELINE, who puzzles him.

ROBIN SEARS, son of Croydon, is surprised when Stone mentions the dolls Folson had owned.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLIII

Stone amused them all with his description of the dolls that had belonged to Garrett Folson.

"It's not so surprising," said Sears, with a twinkle in his eye. "A born collector will choose the strangest kind of collectible antique weapons, rare other collectibles. I'm not sure the dolls aren't more admirable. At least, they're less dangerous."

"I'd like to see those dolls," Robin said. "Angel adores them."

"Well, the dolls are among the finest. They must be imported. I never saw any more beautiful ones— if one is fond of dolls."

Breakfast over, and it being too early to expect to see Carmelita Valdon, Stone went to the auction rooms. A confab with the principals there brought about a more exhaustive inquiry into the sales made the night before the murder of Garrett Folson.

And it was pretty well established that as the auction drew to a close that night, the attendants somewhat hastily gathered odds and ends of wares into bundles and sold them rapidly, taking, in most instances, the first bid made.

This, though done without the sanction of the proprietors, was not unprecedented, for thus the counters were cleared and the way made ready for next day's enterprises.

Few of the salespeople could remember definitely the customers who had bought these bundles, but at last one clerk came forward with a story of a man who had purchased the very last one.

"I remember," he said, "because the chap only bid five dollars, but I let him take it, partly to get rid of the last lot and partly because the buyers had thinned out so I didn't think there'd be another bid."

"What did he look like?" Stone asked.

"He had a white mustache. That's all I remember especially. He was just an ordinary-looking fellow, not rich but not poor either. Don't remember his clothes at all, but I couldn't help seeing that white mustache and I thought he was odd. But his voice didn't sound very old. More middle-aged like. I didn't see his hair; he kept his hat on. He paid cash for his bundle and took it along with him. Didn't seem embarrassed or flustered, just sort of quiet-like and indifferent."

"A collector?"

"No, I don't think so. But you can't tell always. A real collector is foxey and pretends he isn't a collector at all. So you can't tell."

"No, I suppose not. And this bundle this last sale, had a pichu in it?"

"Yes, sir. An old one, with a worn-out velvet scabbard, just like the one the police have."

"What else was in it?"

"Trash mostly. Nothing of the same era. A Chinese ink-holder and a Japanese incense-burner. But not valuable or in good condition. He paid all the lot was worth."

"And you can't think of any other distinguishing trait he had?"

"Not one. He was just like one of a hundred guys who come in here every day. It was only that white mustache that made him stick in my memory at all."

"He's the man," Fleming Stone told himself, as he left the shop and turned his steps back toward the Majusaca.

Yet he had not entirely put the idea of Carmelita out of his considerations. And, as he puzzled over it, it came to him that somebody had said the night before that she had human tools to work for her.

Was the man with the white mustache one of these? Had he bought the old weapon for Carmelita's use, either ignorant of her purpose or cognizant thereof?

Who could he have been? And where was any man with a white mustache? Such a facial adornment was enough of a rarity nowadays to be conspicuous, even among the hordes of people at Ocean Town.

And then it came to him. A false mustache, of course!

There is no easier, simpler and yet more effective disguise than a false mustache, particularly a noticeable one.

Granting, then, the disguise was intentional, and the purchase was made with the expectation of using the weapon for a murderous purpose!

So the man was not necessarily old; probably not at all so, and the next step was to learn his identity.

Not an easy matter, as there seemed to be nothing to go upon but that assumption of a false mustache.

But aside from the dolls and the danger, it was the only material clue in sight, and Fleming Stone set to work to make it yield up its secret.

As he neared the hotel he met Robin Sears.

"Hello," said the youth, "we've found the man in the green bathing suit."

"Who is he?" asked Stone.

"His name is Preston; he's a stuffy old coot, and he doesn't remember dad at all! Cheerful outlook!"

"Never mind," Stone told him,

"we've got a nice white mustache to work on."

Fleming Stone walked along the boardwalk toward the Hotel Majusaca, thinking deeply. Yet his absorption in thought did not prevent his enjoyment of his surroundings. Though he cared little for surf-bathing, the sights and sounds of the crowds of merry-makers pleased his senses as a whole rather than in any detail. The rolling chairs with their human freight and their varied types of pushers interested and amused him, and though he looked at nothing closely, he saw it all as a huge moving picture.

Yet all the time his reason was working on the case in hand.

He had not the slightest doubt that the man with the white mustache was an agent for some one else, and that the mustache was a disguise.

But why was the man not a principal? he asked himself. Why not the murderer himself?

If so, it must have been one of the men already mixed up with the affair.

Of course, it might have been an entire stranger, but Stone's experience led him to think that this was unlikely. For usually a murderer is sooner or later shown to be acquainted with his victim, if only by the casual testimony or evidence of bystanders or onlookers.

If—and there was always the possibility—if Garrett Folson had been murdered by some one that his surviving friends and relatives knew nothing of, that fact must also be proved. But the immediate business in hand for Stone was to prove that Croydon Sears had nothing to do with the crime, and this necessitated the investigation of all toward whom the finger of suspicion pointed.

To do this report that the man in the green bathing suit had been found must be looked into later. At present Stone's thoughts centered on one figure, that of Carmelita Valdon.

"Just the one for the part," the detective pondered. "The right type for a murderer, and proved already to have had motive and opportunity, and—if the white mustached chap was her emissary—she had a way to get her weapon."

How she could carry the knife in to the ocean unobserved, Stone did not stop to think. For he knew whoever killed Folson HAD carried the knife into the water, and, clearly, it would be easier for a woman to conceal such a thing in her bathing costume than for a man.

In fact, Stone thought, that point scored heavily in favor of a woman criminal. For, with the more or less elaborate suits they wore nowadays, ample opportunity was offered for the concealment of a knife, while a man, with his simple one or two-piece suit, had small chance to hide anything of the sort.

Reaching the Majusaca, he found Mrs. Valdon exquisitely arrayed in a morning costume appropriate for the beach.

(To Be Continued)

There is something Stone knows that Carmelita Valdon has not told, and he is determined to get it from her.

NEED EQUIPMENT TO HAVE REAL SCHOOL Teachers Urged Not to Hesitate About Asking for School Supplies

Madison—(AP)—Wisconsin rural school teachers are advised to "go and get it" in an article presented in the forthcoming Wisconsin Journal of Education by Frank J. Lowth, Janesville educator.

"Why don't you get the blackboard restated?" the article asks. "Why wait longer for that curtain to be fixed? Why get along without desk copies of upper grade books? Some rural teachers seem willing to put up with anything. Maybe they are too afraid to ask for things at all, or if they ask once they wait and wait before asking again. This is a bad policy for both teacher and school. The school cannot be run successfully without the necessary equipment, so ask for what you need, courteously and go right after it."

Emphasis is placed on the importance of study above recitation by the article. It says that children "should not study primarily to recite and the teacher should not think of it in that way. The recitation should not consist especially or exclusively of a testing procedure but should be an opportunity for teacher and pupils to get ready for successful individual study. The teacher who succeeds in teaching pupils how to study successfully has done the biggest thing that the school can do for a child.

"Your job is not to teach pupils simply to know. The best teachers use knowledge, facts, subject matter as the means for changing the mind and heart, the personality of the child. You are teaching children, not subject matter and your huge purpose should be to change the child for the better in attitudes, habits, tastes, ideals appreciation and the like."

important? Is it that a farthing off isn't considered a bargain?

One is inclined to believe that modern woman isn't so different as one might think. Just two days ago the wicker, who believes herself to be a modern woman, was seen in the department of adornment for thirty-nine dollars and ninety-five cents without in the least realizing that she had paid forty dollars for it until she got home. When she started out she limited herself to thirty or, at the most, thirty-five. In making the selection, articles at various prices were shown, many much higher than the amount she had fixed for spending. She was in a hurry—the figure "thirty" stayed in her head and she bought. The next day she had been on the price tag, the lady of the first person—singular—would never have paid it in the world.

I believe Comess would do a kind thing, in fact if it were paid a bill for a good piece of furniture, to let a woman pay for it in ten days. But just this is what we women feel poor price means, so to speak.

Kaukauna—The board of public works at its special meeting Tuesday evening in the city clerk's office decided to ask the Warden-Allen Co. of Milwaukee, general contractors of the recently constructed Wisconsin ave. bridge, to waive their rights to the unfinished part of the contract so that the city might enter into agreement with Joseph McCarty Construction Co. of this city to finish the work. Work still remaining to be done on the bridge includes paving the north and south approaches and the intersection between the lift span and the span leading to the island, installation of safety devices on the lift, construction of handrails and the removal of the piers remaining in the river.

The board also decided, providing the consent of the mayor, to have the bridge drawn on the city map. This bridge is badly in need of repair. The joints are to be replaced. The McCarty Construction Co. will do the repair work on a day basis. This work is to be done immediately.

"WHAT PRICE GLORY"

Even more picturesque than the villages of France are the costumes worn by the French peasant women. Dolores Del Rio, who portrays the French peasant girl in the movie version of "What Price Glory," at Fischer's Appleton Theatre Thursday April 21 wears the tight calico bodice, the full skirt, the woolen knitted hose, white (but not for style), and the wooden shoes which thump, thump thump down the one friendly street of the village of Bourges, near the Bellette Woods. A brightly colored scarf adorns her black head and the ornamental apron worn by French peasants for festive occasions and Sundays dresses her properly for any number of "dates" with American soldiers.

Frenchwomen are expert embroiderers. No needlework is too tedious for them to perform. The laces, the aprons, the hoods, the quilts of even poor families are works of delicacy and art. The ubiquitous apron, as one might call that most important of pieces which goes to complete the French country woman's dress, is a matter of special pride. Worked in many shades of thread, in many designs, it does full justice to the hours and hours of patience so expended while on a clear day down in the shade along the river can be seen the gaily bound head of many a woman washing her clothes. The background for the actors of "What Price Glory" was designed and made from exact replicas of French village and the French peasant costume was minutely and truthfully followed, and although the picture was taken in Hollywood, the illusion is so great that one is soon convinced he is seeing France.

KING-BAGGOT, DATES BACK TO ANCIENT HISTORY OF MOVIES

King Baggot, the first real star of pictures, and now one of the screen's foremost directors, whose latest production, "Perch of the Devil" is coming to Fischer's Appleton Theatre tomorrow, probably has contributed as much to the advancement of the screen as any single player or director in the industry.

He was the first American director to go on "location" to Europe. Some years ago, Baggot, heading a film unit as director and star, was sent abroad by Universal to make a series of pictures.

The most famous production made on this trip was an elaborate picture filmed in Paris, and released under the title of "Absinthie."

Baggot, who entered pictures from the stage, as a star long before Hollywood was ever heard of, organized the first motion picture club in the world. It was called the Screen Club of New York and on its roster of charter members is included such distinguished names as Carl Laemmle, Thomas A. Edison, Adolph Zukor, P. A. Powers, Charles Kessel, Charles Bauman and all the other leading producers stars and directors of that day.

It might be added, parenthetically, that of those producers prominent in that day, only three, Laemmle, Zukor and Powers, are still connected with the picture industry. Kessel and Bauman, leaders of that period, are now names unknown to the average film fan.

William Desmond, one of the best known stars in the independent field has the role of John Morgan, a wealthy New York clubman who is forced to hurry to Southern California on his private car to investigate false

Dedham Serene While World Storms Over Death Sentence

BY GENE COHN

Dedham, Mass., — In this cloud-shaded old town, sparkling white in its new spring coat of paint two men await the coming of a certain sinister date in July — the day when they are to die.

One is an Italian fish peddler, Dario Vanzetti; the other a factory hand, Nicola Sacco. Over their plight, Dedham betrays little if any concern. But the rest of the world is flustered as two such men never succeeded in flustering it before.

THE VOICE OF MILLIONS

A voice that began with the whispers of individuals, but which now booms through the corridors of the Boston state house and thins hourly in the ears of the state's chief executive, Governor Alvin T. Fuller — a voice that is the chorused cry literally of millions of men and women — is pleading that Sacco and Vanzetti be spared from the fate decreed for them by the Massachusetts courts.

It is the voice of the "public conscience," those who have defended Sacco and Vanzetti say. It no longer is the voice solely of labor sympathizers, liberals and such. It is the voice of college professors, ministers of the gospel, men and women of wealth, conservative citizenry, socially and financially prominent folk; bankers, members of parliament, lawyers, merchants, politicians.

FURY'S FUSE TOUCHED OFF

It is raised in a "cause" which has roused groups in South America to fury, which has blasted a foreign consulate by way of indignation, and which has sent workers of dozen nations on strike.

echoes from Mexico to Lapland, across Europe into Asia.

All because of two men who a few years ago were going through life as members of the vast army of the anonymous.

Whether Sacco and Vanzetti justly were convicted of murder or were unjustly "framed" because they were war-time "radicals" is the question that escapes the boundaries of New England and goes dancing over the earth.

If description of the myriad protests as the working of the "public conscience" is correct, the Sacco-Vanzetti case is an extraordinary test of that conscience's potency.

GOVERNOR FULLER IS TARGET

Governor Fuller is the state official who must answer the protests sooner or later. He is silent so far.

Marsh language is used in many of the protests. The proposed execution of Sacco and Vanzetti is referred to in many of them as "judicial murder."

Criticism of the courts of Massachusetts, the "voice" points out that the highest tribunals of the state cannot, under severely restrictive laws, consider new evidence or facts of any sort in passing on appeals such as those which Sacco and Vanzetti vainly have made.

It points out that since the two Italians first faced trial for murder in connection with a $15,000 payroll robbery at South Braintree, Mass., in April, 1920, the entire complexion of the case has changed — but that it has been impossible to bring this change before the higher courts.

"VOICE" ACCUSES JUDGE

Judge Webster Thayer, of Worcester, the trial judge in the case, and a leading figure in it throughout the seven years of its history accused by the "voice" of personal bias.

Narratives of "red raids" occupied the front pages of newspapers when Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested, and the "voice" charges that their prosecution was intended simply to rid Massachusetts of them as "radicals." The issue of whether Sacco and Vanzetti committed murder, it is contended, was all but lost in the shuffle.

The testimony of important state witnesses has been exploded, new defense witnesses have been found, the confession of another prisoner to participation in the crime has exonerated the men on whom the law fastened it—these are details of the complaint the "voice" makes.

Professor Felix Frankfurter, of the Harvard law school, has put the case under a microscope and, in a public document, classified it as standing on feeble legs.

HARVARD LAW COMMITTEE

Four Harvard law professors have been seated in a committee formed to get some action from the governor.

A gun expert, who gave for the prosecution its most important evidence concerning the death bullet, has since pointed out that a trick question affected his testimony against the men, and that his complete opinion never had been secured.

Dedham goes on its way complacently, the while. To Dedham, it is a matter for the courts, not for the "public conscience" — and the courts already have acted.

DEATH WAS TORY

That is the history of Dedham. In the days of the American Revolution it was stolidly British, aloof to the presence of the storm outside. The revolution came and went. It remained unshakenly aristocratic, while year by year factory towns sprang up all about with their imported populations of sons of alien lands.

Dedham is Anglo-Saxon. Its tradition reaches over a few brief miles to Plymouth, landing place of the Puritans, down whose long main street once trod the fish peddler, Vanzetti, calling his street cries and stopping in North Plymouth to chatter with housewives in the tongue of "Fuscony."

Such inherent dignity might not be expected to notice that two shadows

SMALL CHANCE FOR STATE, COUNTY AID ON WISCONSIN-AVE

Highway Engineer Suggests Narrow Pavement Until Help Is Given

There is practically no chance that Appleton will receive either state or county aid for paving Wisconsin-ave this year, according to O. C. Rollman, Green Bay, division engineer of the Wisconsin Highway commission, who visited with Mayor A. C. Rulle Monday afternoon. Mr. Rollman stated that he did not think it would be possible for Appleton to receive the $20,000 promised by the county as aid on Wisconsin-ave.

His advice to the city is to build a 28 foot slab of pavement without the curb and gutter and then if either the state or county later decide that this road should be widened a five foot strip could be added at that time and then the curb and gutter could also be constructed. Bids were for a 26-foot pavement with curb and gutter and unless the E. H. Coughlin company of Chicago, the successful bidder, will agree to take the job if the council decides to make changes, it will be necessary to have new plans drawn and to call for new bids.

Mayor Rulle believes if the city lays the entire pavement this year there probably will be great difficulty getting state or county aid in the future date when the aid was available. However, if the project is left unfinished and the need for a wider pavement later is realized there will at least be a possibility of receiving state and county aid.

The matter will be brought before the common council at the meeting next Tuesday night.

THREE NEW ALDERMEN SAMPLE CITY GOVERNING

Three new aldermen were given their first taste of assisting in managing the affairs of the city government at an informal meeting of the new council Tuesday night at the city hall. The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing rules and regulations of the council for the coming year. Several minor changes will be made. The three new aldermen are Philipp Vogt, Sixth ward; W. H. Vander Voest, Fifth ward; and W. H. Gmeiner, Third ward. The old council will meet for the last time next Tuesday evening and as soon as it adjourns the new council will meet and elect appointive officers for the coming year.

ST. OLAF BAND PLAYS HERE

Appleton music lovers will have an opportunity to hear a unique and well-known musical organization, on April 21, 1927, when the St. Olaf Concert Band from St. Olaf College, Northfield, Minnesota, gives its concert in Lawrence Memorial Chapel, under the leadership of Mr. J. Arndt Bergh.

The St. Olaf Concert Band was organized thirty-seven years ago, primarily for the purpose of supplying music at the larger festive occasions at the college. Following a remarkable growth in prestige at home and in response to insistent demands from other cities, the band arranged short concert tours, which for many years already have become an annual event. Although preparations for a concert tour means many months of the most painstaking work on the part of director and band members, these trips are looked forward to with keen anticipation. Rigid discipline is maintained not only at home but also while the band is en tour.

Observe Health Rules And Wipe Out Diabetes

Madison—Diabetes can be nearly wiped out of existence as a menace if the people of the nation would observe health rules and exercises in a normal manner.

Children often get diabetes as the result of contracting a communicable disease.

People past 30 may contract it by allowing themselves to grow too fat and not having a periodic health examination.

Both causes can largely be controlled by proper health and diet rules, the health committee of the State Medical Society declares in a bulletin issued today.

"It is possible to prevent the occurrence of diabetes in a considerable number of people who are found to suffer with it each year," declares the bulletin. "The prevention of disease is receiving so much more attention from both physicians and the rest of the public that this statement will be received with interest by many people. It is not certain at present how we may prevent every case of diabetes but there are certain types which we can control. In children the disease is often caused by infections which begin in the tonsils or repeated colds in the head. When this is not the only cause it may be the factor which added to an inherited factor which added to an inherited

Prompt treatment of colds and sore throats is advisable for many reasons. Repeated attacks of head colds and of tonsillitis merit thorough attention from a competent physician. When the source of an infection is removed, the damage to the rest of the body is prevented or stopped.

"In people past the age of 30 the common cases of diabetes occur in those who allow themselves to get too fat. The prevention of the diabetic trouble will come by the care in eating and the improved exercise which maintain the weight at a strictly normal level. There is new and more urgent reason found year by year, why persons over 30 years of age should be very careful to remain within the normal limits of weight for their height. A fat man may be jolly but he deserves pity and help rather than to be laughed at.

"Diabetes has been a disease of fascination to both the physician and his patient for many years and still most people know nothing more about it than the occurrence of sugar in the urine. The sugar in the urine is not the chief thing which occurs in diabetes but it is usually the cause of the patient's visit to his physician. The question will, therefore, come to mind: 'What is the trouble in diabetes?' It is now possible to state it rather briefly. Just behind the stomach is a small gland, the pancreas, one of the duties of which is to make a constant supply of insulin. If the supply of insulin is inadequate the body is unable to use as much sugar as it should. The inadequate supply of insulin is the characteristic feature of diabetes.

"In the treatment of diabetes it is necessary to allow the patient to eat a sufficient amount of ordinary foods to keep his weight and allow him to do whatever productive work he desires. The diet which is now prescribed for diabetic patients is devised to furnish as little sugar as is necessary for the body and to make up the balance of food by the use of large amounts of fat. Since, however, even fat leads to the formation of some sugar in the body all the food must be measured and there is no food which the diabetic patient should eat in unlimited quantities. The important thing for the diabetic patient is not what he eats so much as how much he eats of different food material."

NOTED ORCHESTRA AND SOLOISTS IN MUSIC FESTIVAL

Opera Stars and Minneapolis Symphony Come Here for Two Day Program

The Minneapolis symphony orchestra and soloists from the Chicago Civic Opera Co. will appear with schola cantorum of Lawrence college Conservatory of music in a spring music festival at Lawrence Memorial Chapel May 12 and 13 under the auspices of a group of Appleton men. Operatic night will be held the first evening when choruses from the best loved operas will be sung by chorus, and solo, and trio numbers will be sung by the opera singers. They are Marjorie Maxwell, soprano; Ricardo Martin, tenor, and Virgilio Lazzari, bass. Choral and symphony night will be held May 13 when the symphony orchestra will appear in noted orchestral compositions and will accompany the chorus in its singing of "Lullaby's Departure," by Cole Porter. Taylor, Bernard Ferguson, baritone, of the Metropolitan Opera Co., will be a soloist with the chorus and a soprano and tenor will be engaged. Henri Verbrugge is conductor of the orchestra.

A special concert for school children will be presented the afternoon of May 13 by the orchestra and a chorus of 200 Appleton school children directed by Dr. Earl L. Baker, supervisor of music. The children will sing a cantata which has not been announced.

SINGS HERE

Bernard Ferguson, a baritone with the Metropolitan Opera Co., New York, will be one of the soloists at the Spring Music festival to be held here on May 12 and 13.

The second half of the program will be given by the orchestra alone.

The festival is an Appleton project, sponsored by Appleton citizens who wish to secure 600 patrons to buy season tickets for the two evening concerts. The patron list is to be completed by April 15. Names of these to be patrons will be printed on the program of the festival. Carl S. Mc-

HEALTH SHOW FOR CHILDREN AT THREE APPLETON SCHOOLS

The Punch and Judy health show of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association will be presented at McKinley, First ward and Jefferson schools Thursday by Miss Esther McKinley, First ward and Jefferson schools Thursday by Miss Esther Exner, a representative of the association. Fundamental health lessons of fresh air, good food and rest will be taught in the entertainment. The old time Punch and Judy acts are the basis of the performance. The puppets take the parts of Thoughtless, Careless, Superstition and Tuberculosis.

Miss Mary Orbison, city school nurse, is in charge of the local appearance of the show. This is one of the projects of the Anti-Tuberculosis association for spreading health knowledge and is financed by the sale of Christmas seals.

Build Sidewalk
A 4-foot sidewalk is being built along the north side of the Appleton Vocational school from S. Allen-st. to the north entrance of the school. The Greunke Brothers Construction company is in charge of the work.

Kee is business manager of the May Music Festival association, and mail orders may be sent to him.

Through the cooperation of Irving Zuelke of the Zuelke Music Co., an orthophonic Victrola will be given to the school which sells the most tickets for the afternoon performance. The contest will be operated on a percentage basis. The campaign will be conducted next week.

NEEDED SANCTION TO USE GASOLINE

Special Permission Was Attached to Fire Insurance Policies Years Ago

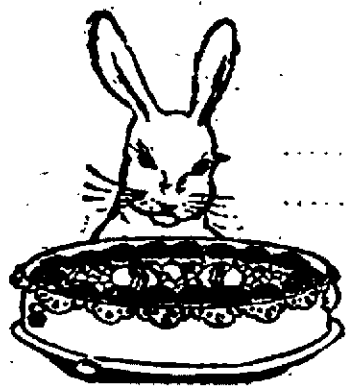

Special and detailed permissions to use dangerous goods like gasoline stoves were attached to fire insurance policies 40 years ago and probably longer. Such a permission was found on a policy written by the A. H. Conkey and Son Insurance Co., for the Schlafer Hardware Co. on May 16, 1887, and found among other old papers by O. P. Schlafer this week.

In the specifications of the use of the stove it was said: "The reservoir is to be filled in daylight only. Warranted by the assured that no artificial light be permitted in the room when the reservoir be filled, and no gasoline except that contained in the reservoir shall be kept in the building and not more than five gallons in a tight and entirely closed metallic can, free from leak on the premises adjacent thereto."

It added, "A little carelessness may hazard your LIFE as well as property." Also, "It is said that one pint of gasoline will impregnate 200 cubic feet of air and make it explosive and it depends upon the proportions of air and vapor whether it becomes burning gas or destructive explosive."

Insurance policies today still have a special permission clause but it is more far reaching. P. M. Conkey said, for it provides that any article necessary to the business may be used. Such permissions probably were given long before the one issued to the hardware company in 1887, he believed.

CANDY

For the whole family on Easter Day

We've filled baskets for the children with big and little Easter eggs in fascinating pastel tints, and filled them with luscious marshmallow centers. Little chicks on the eggs with a fat little bunny standing protectively by. Also a fine display of boxed chocolates for the grown-ups with a suggestion of Easter in their boxes.

A little over a year in the life of most of us is just a short span of time—a few days of sunshine, a few days of rain, sorrow, joys—and it's gone!

But the past year has meant much more to us of the Diana Sweet Shoppe. For it was a test year for us — a year to determine whether we were to take our place as an Appleton institution, or become just "another store."

We believe we proved our aims, and our merchandise worthy of the permanence we planned. We have justified our judgment that there were hundreds of Appleton people who would welcome this modern sweet shoppe, its central location, its service, and its comprehensive showing of all that goes to make a modern sweet shoppe.

And now in our second year, we feel that once more we must pay our thanks to our old friends and our new friends who have made our first year so successful, and to our associates and employees, who, working to our ideas and ideals have rendered such a dependable service to our friends, goes a public expression of gratitude.

And to all Appleton, we pledge our store to strict quality standards and a policy of fair dealings, ever mindful that whatever gain is to be ours, can only come through honesty, dependability and conscientious service.

LAST YEAR'S ROAD WORK ELIMINATES 41 BAD CROSSINGS

Neenah Bridge Is One of Projects Started in 1926 to Be Completed Soon

Madison—(P)—Completion of work started in 1926 will mean the elimination of 41 dangerous railroad-highway grade crossings in Wisconsin, according to the quarterly progress report of the State Highway Commission. The type of remedy for dangerous crossings used in most cases is by relocation of the highway. Overhead and subway types of elimination are other methods used to make Wisconsin's highways more safe for motorists.

The quarterly progress report on this work declares that an expenditure of approximately $1,000,000 per annum is required to eliminate crossings at a rate which will be satisfactory to the public.

"During the year," says the report, "several conferences were held with the engineers and executive officers of the railroads operating in Wisconsin and they have all expressed themselves as favoring, in principle, the plan of grade crossing improvement advocated by the highway department."

"The commission believes that the actual removal of highway traffic from the grade crossing is of more importance than the actual determination of who is to pay the bill. It was felt that an expenditure of $1,000,000 per annum would remove the crossings at a rate satisfactory to the public, and the railroads' share of the amount was allocated to the various companies in the ratio that the state trunk highway crossings on the one road bore to the total of 758 on all of the roads."

A total of approximately $2,344,000 will have been spent for the year 1926 in the building of bridges if the plans and specifications prepared for such work are carried out. This sum is about $126,000 in excess of the sum spent for the same kind of work in 1925, according to the quarterly progress report of the state highway commission.

The state built 353 bridges in 1925 at an estimated cost of $2,217,000. Plans and specifications for bridge building in 1926 called for 279 bridges at a cost of about $2,344,000.

Some of the larger bridges started in 1926 are:

The Atwater Bridge-Milwaukee co. Fox River Bridge across Fox river in City of Neenah. Portland Ave. Bridge over Rock river in Beloit. Cost slightly over $100,000.

The Muscoda Bridge—Over the Wisconsin river at village of Muscoda.

The Scott Bridge—over the Wisconsin river in Wausau.

The West Main Street bridge—over the Wisconsin river in Merrill. Bridge to cost $205,000.

Oak Street Bridge—over Baraboo river in Baraboo. One of the largest bridge jobs ever undertaken by the department. Cost approximately $400,000.

Democratic Leaders Favor Indianapolis For 1928 National Convention; City Is Ideally Located

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—The next Democratic national convention will be held in Indianapolis, a powerful group of Democrats who met here recently decided.

This group, incidentally, is composed of men who have the interests of the Democratic party at heart. Recalling what happened in the New York setting in 1924, they are extremely anxious to provide the most auspicious and least objectionable background for the take-off of 1928.

The consensus of opinion in favor of Indianapolis was almost unanimous when the question was brought up and the various cities bidding for the convention were considered.

New York, of course, is out of the question. The Democratic national committee selects the site and if New York obtained a half dozen votes in view of the memories of those packed galleries in Madison Square Garden three years ago, it would be lucky.

BOSTON WANTS IT, TOO
Boston is trying to buy the convention, but Boston is regarded as an Al Smith town.

For similar reasons—with New York and 1924 still in mind—Chicago is considered a worse site than New York, if that is possible.

Denver and San Francisco are considered too far west—and California, incidentally, has a candidate in McAdoo.

St. Louis is eliminated because Missouri has a candidate, Senator James A. Reed. The drys add the objection that St. Louis is wet. The Reed angle is regarded as also pushing Kansas City out of the picture.

Cleveland has been seriously considered and still has a bare chance, but the Republican party is likely to hold its own convention there and, if only through tradition, the Democrats refuse to hold their own caucus in the same tent. Furthermore, Ohio is also likely to produce a candidate and there are cross-currents of factionalism in the Ohio Democracy in which the party leaders don't want to mix.

CINCINNATI OF WET CITIES
Cincinnati is also in Ohio. The drys contend that Cincinnati is wet and they're certainly run-sly of wet cities following the 1924 fiasco.

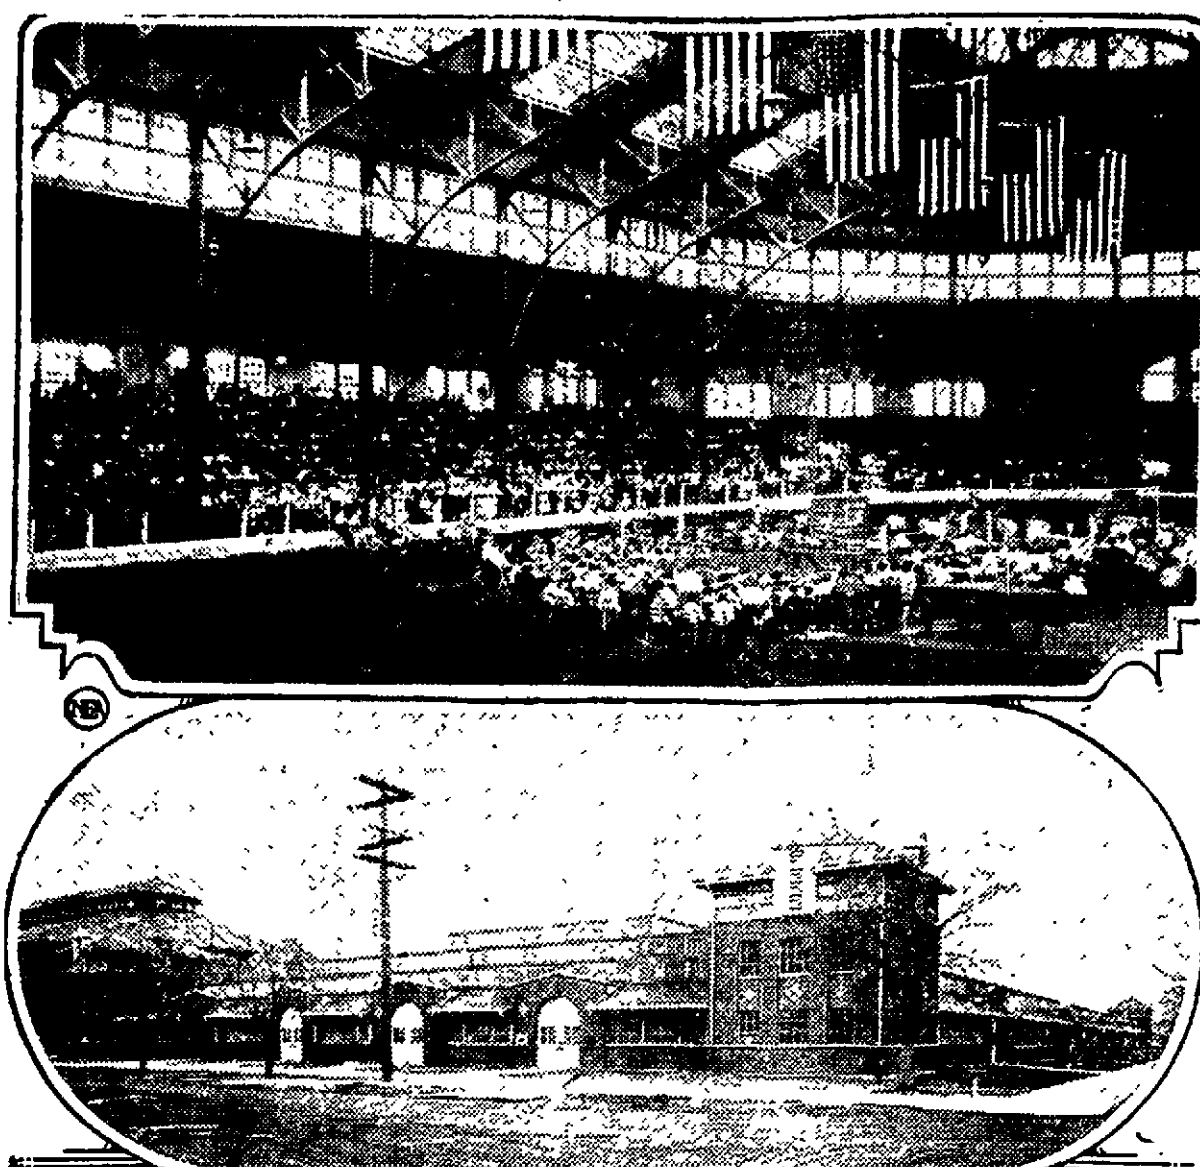

Louisville wants the convention, but the powerful group of leaders of whom we speak feels there is nothing to be gained in Kentucky.

Detroit is considered a wet city, rather out of the way and in a state which the Democrats never carry in a presidential year.

Of course, Tom Taggart has already got himself an Indiana candidate in the somewhat obscure person of Evans Woolen, but while the other Democrats take Taggart himself rather seriously they don't take Woolen seriously at all.

On the other hand, Indiana is considered a doubtful state in the heart of an important midwestern area into which the Democrats must break in 1928. It has an ideal location geographically, its railroad communications are the best and adequate hotel accommodations are promised.

A DOUBTFUL STATE
The tentative agreement on Indianapolis is said to be the cold, deliberate judgment of men inside the party who want to keep away from states which

Loss Of Citizenship Blots Out All Comedy In Earl Carroll Bathtub Farce As Producer Faces Prison

BY GENE COIN

New York—That long engagement, Earl Carroll has contracted to play in Atlanta has been discovered, upon the eve of its premiere, to be a drama from which the comedy scenes suddenly have been cut.

What started out as a naughty farce under the working title of "The Bathtub Girl," with words and music supplied largely by the tabloid newspapers, now turns out to be ironic realism, featuring the closing of prison doors.

Not the least irony lies in the circumstance that this Irish lad who climbed from a program boy to the highest peaks of Broadway, thanks to a precocious managerial ability, should now find himself the baffled and tragic victim of bad management.

HE "MUFFED" IN A CRISIS. Again, there is more than a little irony in the fact that the slim young producer who had rehearsed so many companies into smooth performances should have "muffed his lines" at a moment when his liberty was at stake. He found himself suddenly cast in a part with which he was not familiar.

There had been that now famous annual party, staged in honor of the man whose backing gave Carroll his start as a big producer; there had been, upon the following morning, the splash of a nude girl in a bathtub upon the front page of a tabloid; there had been an investigation, and columns of scandal gossip concerning what went on at the party; there had been an arrest under the "volstead act" and it had all smattered more of travesty than of seriousness.

ONE "NO" CAUSED IT ALL. Placed upon the witness stand, Carroll had been asked about the girl in the bathtub, and the young man who had risen to fame and fortune by refusing to be anyone's "yesman," said "No," once too often. He had taken the wrong cue. Acquitted of the liquor violation charge, he was convicted of perjury.

The sentence was one year and a day in the federal prison plus a $2,000 fine. Even this might be considered by Broadway as an opportunity of retiring for a year to write a few more musical comedies, but for the fact that automatically the sentence carries with it a loss of citizenship. And that's the black ink that blots out all the comedy.

While the loss of a year's liberty might be taken with more or less good grace, facing business life thereafter without the standing of an American citizen becomes not only a tough handicap, but a load a bit heavy for a young man who has been a bit proud of his record.

In the appeals being made to President Coolidge it is being recalled that Carroll, during the World War was a pretty "good citizen." Although allowed exemption, he enlisted as a private and was assigned to the air service. He was commissioned a lieutenant and was in active service for two years, during which time he was severely injured in two crashes.

"After all," Broadway was saying, "What he said and did harmed no one but himself."

But for the present chapter, Carroll's story might have been contrived by Horatio Alger. Briefly sketched, it starts with a job as program boy at the age of 12 in a met Gus Edwards, the vaudeville producer and went to writing songs.

INTO THE MUSIC BUSINESS. Carroll entered the music house of Leo Feist as ad writer and secretary. He signed up Caruso to write the song "Dreams of Long Ago" when everyone said it couldn't be done. He wrote the operas "Canary Cottage," and "So Long Letty," and made some more money. Then more song successes: "Hesitation Waltz" and "Send Me a Kiss by Wire." And then a quick plunge into the musical revue that landed him with the three biggest—Flo Ziegfeld, George White and Earl Carroll.

When his first "Vanities" had run a year the old adventure urge came upon him and Carroll disappeared from Broadway, taking a job as deck hand on a Paris-bound liner. Discovered by returning Broadway theater magnates, he explained merely that he had been "fed up" with the theatre and wanted to get a change of perspective.

THE PICTURE OF DEJECTION. Carroll "lengthened" Broadway seven blocks by going up to the Fifties and building a new theater. A dreamer by nature, he backed his dreams by action.

Slim, romantic, somewhat of a poet, the young producer today is the picture of utter dejection.

There you have a fair cross-section of the whole story. Were it not serious, there would be something fantastically humorous about Carroll's case. But Broadway, which snickered for a time, finds little at which to laugh now. A year's run in Atlanta, with citizenship lost, isn't funny.

QUESTION VICTIMS OF TYPHOID FEVER

Patients Must Fill Out Questionnaire Before Being Released

Before a case of typhoid fever can be released, from quarantine it is necessary that a very minute questionnaire be prepared by the state board of health, regarding the stricken person and his living conditions up to the time he was taken ill, he filled out, according to Theodore Sanders, deputy health officer.

The name of the person, his address, sex, age, color, business connections at the time he was stricken, and any other within 30 days previous to the date of definite symptoms and the date of blood tests and the name of the attending physician are only a few of the questions which must be answered.

The health officer must ascertain where the patient was at the time he was taken sick, his previous residence or temporary absences within the last 30 days, including auto trips and short visits.

It is necessary to answer questions regarding where the patient ate within 30 days before he was taken ill, where the food was obtained, where the milk, ice cream, drinking water and fresh vegetables came from. The officer must try to determine whether the patient has associated with any person who suffered from the disease within the last five years.

Searching questions regarding the sanitation of the home, the number of occupants at the home, whether or not typhoid fever had occurred there before the present instance, supposed source of the case and sewage disposal.

This rigid rule exists so that the state health officers may better check this disease.

Final examination for appointment as second lieutenants in the regular army are to be held from June 29 to 25, according to an announcement received by local officers. Preliminary examinations will be held from time to time as applications are received. CHARGE DRIVER, OF BUS DID NOT STOP AT GRADE CROSSING

Albert Hillman, Arraigned in Green Bay Court, Pleads Not Guilty

Arraigned Wednesday morning in municipal court at Green Bay for failing to stop his bus at a railroad crossing, Albert Hillman, 733 W. Spencer-st., pleaded not guilty, and the case was adjourned to Tuesday, April 19. He furnished bail of $100.

The case is one of the first of this kind to be heard in the Green Bay court for several years. It is reported that the overgrowth of an alleged near accident at a Northwestern railroad crossing on highway 15, about two miles south of DePeré, last Jan. 23.

Hillman, driving a bus for the Fox River Bus Co. to this city, was returning to Appleton from Green Bay with more than a dozen passengers late that afternoon. All were young men and women, many of whom had participated in an ice skating tournament in Green Bay that afternoon.

The day was cold, the windows of the bus were clouded, and nobody noticed an approaching train as the bus neared the railroad crossing. Not until the vehicle was almost on the tracks was the train discovered, it was reported.

It was too late to try to stop, so the driver stepped on the accelerator, just getting the bus across the tracks as the train passed, it is alleged.

Prompt action on the part of the engineer and Louis Schoepke, the fireman, is said to have prevented a collision. When the train, which was headed south, reached Kaukauna, the trainmen instructed Kaukauna police to stop the bus when it reached that city. An officer stationed himself on highway 15 and flagged the driver as he drove by, but as the former was not in a uniform the driver did not stop.

Mr. Schoepke is the complainant in the case.

Capener was the driver of the motorcycle which ran into a house on the northeast corner of N. Richmond and W. Lorraine-sts. shortly before noon last Saturday. He was carrying two passengers, Thomas McKinnzie and Mayora Kettelson, all of the same address, in a sidecar, McKinnzie received an injury to his leg and was taken to St. Elizabeth hospital.

The accident occurred when Capener swerved to the left to avoid a collision with an automobile truck which he had been following north on N. Richmond-st., and which turned to go west on W. Lorraine-st. Capener had just turned out to pass the truck when the latter vehicle turned. Before reaching the street intersection, the truck driver held out his hand, indicating he intended to turn the corner, it was reported by police.

The police arrested Capener for speeding.

PLUMBERS OPPOSE BILL TO CHANGE CONTRACT SCHEME

Don't Want Plumbing Proposals Included in General Contracts

Walter Murphy of Sheboygan was reelected president of the Fox River Valley Master Plumber's association at the bi-monthly meeting at Hotel Conway Tuesday afternoon. Louis Soutar of Sheboygan was reelected secretary. Approximately 55 plumbers from Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Green Bay and Sheboygan attended the meeting.

P. C. Kuemeyer of Milwaukee, president of the Wisconsin Master Plumber's association and George Recke of Green Bay gave short addresses. Mr. Kuemeyer talked of a measure now before the state legislature to include plumbing contracts in the general contract for public buildings. Mr. Kuemeyer pointed out that if the plumbing work is included in the general contract, the general contractor would figure a profit and the only one to benefit would be the general contractor.

Mr. Kuemeyer said plumbers would do the work at the same cost but the general contractors would seek a profit and the proposed plan would cost the public more money.

He also pointed out that the contractor would receive his money as soon as the work was completed and the plumber might have to wait before he gets his share. The valley association voted to send two members of the body to Madison to appear before the legislative committee and oppose this bill when it is up for hearing.

The plumbers held an open forum discussion on trade matters before they adjourned.

The next meeting will be held in Oshkosh on Tuesday, June 14.

CHILDREN NEED PERFECT RATION TO BE HEALTHY

Child Health Expert Urges More Care in Planning Family Diets

BY W. F. WINSEY

Shiocton — Thirty-five women representing various groups of women in this vicinity Tuesday attended a meeting on Home Economics and Home Demonstration Work, conducted in the high school by Miss Edna Huffman of the agricultural extension service of the University of Wisconsin.

The program consisted of talks by Miss Huffman on Balanced Diet, Planning the Balanced Diet, Type, Meats and Their Preparation, Food Classes and Their Use to the Body, Suggestions for Planning Meals, and The Cost of Food. Mrs. G. H. Jones assisted Miss Huffman with short talks on subjects which she illustrated with moving pictures.

Miss Huffman criticized the use of expensive, balanced rations for farm animals and the use of the odds and ends of food for children. If there is to be a defective balanced ration on the farm, and a perfect one, Miss Huffman would have the defective ration go to the cattle and horses and the perfect ration to the children.

In her talk on Planning the Mixed Diet, Miss Huffman said: "Meal planning is a game in which the housewife is the leader of the family. She carefully plans, selects and prepares the food in the most attractive and appetizing way. The rules of the game demand that she expend the least amount of time, energy and money possible in order to satisfy the need and desires of her family. The prize for playing a winning game is the health and happiness of her family."

"The number of people to be fed will determine to a certain extent what foods may be served. If there is a larger group to be fed on a given amount of money, the food must be of a type which is a 'dollar extender.' This does not mean a cheap grade of food but a good grade of less expensive foods, less expensive cuts of meat, fresh vegetables in season, milk, eggs, dried fruits, cereals and so forth."

"The family composed of members of all ages presents a more complicated problem than one where the children are all young. The child who is tall and slender usually needs more food than the short fat child, due to the larger amount of frame and body surface from which heat is lost. Children at the growing stage need more food per weight than an adult, while at adolescence, they need still more. Small children need more of certain kinds of food as they are building muscle and bone. A little careful planning on the home's part will eliminate many of the usual mistakes made by those who play the game."

"One third of all the deaths of the nation occur below six years. There are ten times as many deaths during the first decade of pre-school life as during the following full decade of school life. Over 80 per cent of all the cases of diphtheria and of all the deaths from diphtheria occur below the age of five. Malnutrition, likewise, is more prevalent among pre-school than among school children."

"The summer, with its abundance of fresh vegetables, offers less of a problem in feeding than the winter. The main object in summer is to feed the family so that the building and energy giving foods are adequate, while the heat affording foods are reduced to the minimum. In winter, more heat and energy giving foods are given in order to supply warmth for the body."

Miss Huffman held a similar meeting at Hortonville on Wednesday and on Thursday she will talk to a group at Mackville.

Women present at the local meeting were: Mrs. H. S. Budd, Mrs. Mike Mack, Mrs. Clifford Fletcher, Mrs. G. H. Jones, Mrs. Charles Singler, Mrs. H. Miller, Mrs. Milo Thompson, Mrs. F. H. WISCONSIN WEATHER

Mostly cloudy in south portion to night and Thursday continued cool.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The low pressure area reported yesterday over the southern plains states is remaining nearly stationary. Meanwhile high pressure over the north is drifting to the lake region and northeastern states. The "low" has caused light rains, extending as far north as central Wisconsin. The high pressure area appears to be gaining the ascendancy in this section, however, and generally fair weather, though with some cloudiness, is anticipated here tonight and Thursday, with no decided change in temperature.

Markets

NUMEROUS SELLING ORDERS ON MARKET

Losses Are Limited to Fractions; Some Substantial Advances Are Made

New York.—(AP)—Selling orders were numerous at the opening of the stock market Wednesday, but losses were limited to fractions, aside from Nash & Kropac, whose shares fell one point, and D. P. 13, Radio Corporation and Savage Arms touched new minimums for the year. Some substantial advances, however, were registered, including a point each in Southern Railway and Union Bag and Paper and 2 points in Air Reduction.

Subsequent buying of high prices opened at 2:30, exerted its usual beneficial effect on sentiment, traders for the moment being more disposed to follow the trend revealed by certain popular shares. Prices of shares of the general class continued to move in opposite direction, Hudson Motors showing strength while General Motors lost ground. Sinclair preferred advanced 2 points in reflection of the favorable annual statement.

Turnover of new steel combinations in the steel market was heavy, but prices were limited to fractions in the prior preferred shares, while the common touched a new 1927 high of 11.37 1/2, a jump of 12 points in Spanish peas to 11.61, featured the firm foreign exchange rate of the renewal of the dollar around $4.55, and French francs just below 2.91 cents.

Investors demanded a big speculative following when a movement either way is started were unusually active in the part of the market. Motors worked higher under the leadership of Mack Truck and Hudson Motors, while the steel group advanced on an increasing scale owing to the unsatisfactory trade situation.

On the demand for new cars, loans to 4 1/2 per cent unquestionably caused some selling, but its effect was neutralized by the fact that Warner Brothers Pictures A rose nearly 6 points.

The market was strong. Total sales approximated 1,900,000 shares.

CHAOS RESTS IN MINDS OF RADIO BOARD MEMBERS

Commission Realizes Intricacies of Task, but Looks for Solution

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—The chaos in radio apparently is well matched by the chaos within the minds of the members of the new radio commission.

Whether this mental chaos will be diminished or increased by the first public hearings held by the commission remains to be seen.

All of which is no knock for the distinguished members of the commission. All of them are high-grade men.

There is a job in which most of us would be quite lost, whereas the commissioners are likely to keep their heads above water and eventually wade out. Thus, the trouble is not that they don't realize the intricacies of their problem, but that they do.

THEY WANT TO PLEASE

First of all, the commission is extremely anxious to please. It is being just as nice to everybody as a small boy during the football before Christmas. It's the most polite government agency in Washington. It knows that in the end there is bound to be criticism, that for all it can labor manfully and conscientiously, some of the squawks may be more or less justified.

Thus, the commissioners receive everyone who calls and exhaust the limits of courtesy. There are plenty of callers, so they will soon have to become hard-boiled or lose in efficiency.

There is a certain element of nervousness in the organization which it would not be fair to rack on anyone in particular because it is not surprising. Nevertheless, all the commissioners are sound, practical men who can keep their feet on the ground.

The commission appears to have been especially sensitive to such criticism as has already been showered upon it. The criticism appears to come from people who haven't been hurt but suspect they will be before the commission gets through.

CATERS TO NONE
The commission is especially anxious to spread the word that it isn't taking instructions from the Department of Commerce and that it wants to give everyone a fair deal. But it is obvious that the commission would be silly if it didn't rely in some part upon the extensive and constructive work that the Department of Commerce has put into the radio situation in the last few years.

Secretary Sam Pickard's office is swamped with mail, but poor Pickard must also receive visitors and be polite to them while gazing ruefully at the stacks of letters upon his desk. Pickard is tackling the job so energetically and with such a skeleton staff that he's in danger of a breakdown, and a breakdown from overwork is about the nastiest thing that ever happens to a federal employee.

But Pickard reads all the letters and appreciates them. He says hundreds reflect careful thought and carry constructive ideas. The vast majority convince sympathy.

SUBMIT COUNTY BILLS BY MONDAY, APRIL 18

Bills against the county must be submitted by Monday, April 18, if they are to be acted on at the April session of the county board, according to John J. Hant-schel, county clerk. If they are not received by that date, they will be held up until the board's November session, he warned. The April session will be held next week, starting at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Notice of the session was mailed to the supervisors Tuesday.

COLLEGE CATALOGS AVAILABLE HERE

Literature May Be Secured at Office of Extension Division

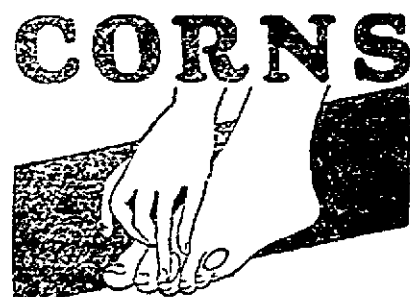

Appleton students who expect to attend the University of Wisconsin or any state college or normal school next fall will not have to send away for their catalogs, according to Marshall Graff, district representative of the University of Wisconsin extension division. Degrees of catalogues from the university and every college and normal school in Wisconsin have been received at the division office and can be secured there.

High school seniors planning to attend the state university no longer are obliged to dodge through the mazes of the old pages of the old state university catalog in order to discover how to become freshmen.

Under the new catalog system, inaugurated last year, high school seniors now get the general information about the university and its courses laid down in a 48-page introductory bulletin. Specific information about each of the various courses of study is sent in a separate bulletin, which may be obtained by sending to the university editor the coupon which constitutes the 48th page of the introductory bulletin.

The 1927-28 introductory bulletin, which is just off the press, contains a map of the university campus, 19 full-page illustrations of university buildings, a calendar of the university year, the roll of the university regents, visitors, and administrative officers, an analysis of student expenses at the university and sections on student life, admission requirements, and the academic work offered in the various schools, colleges and courses.

The old style university catalog still is published in limited numbers for distribution to administrative officers and faculty members, and to other universities and colleges. All others receive the introductory bulletin, published at much smaller expense than the old catalog, and containing in brief form a general survey of university organization and student life.
